

FROM Peg in Washington

BY ALENE (PEG) PHILLIPS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 9.
Dear Marian:
Such a variety of activities and such a variety of weather as we have had since returning from Albuquerque. And on the subject of weather, Secretary Douglas McKay and Larry Smyth arrived from San Francisco Friday night in the midst of the terrific snow blizzard that piled up six and a half inches on autumnal Washington. Three hours late, circling for some time over Washington, they were in the last plane that managed to land. They reported that from Pittsburgh the night changed from clear skies to overwhelming blackness and they saw no lights until the tires actually touched the runway when a bright red glare penetrated the gloom of the blizzard. In addition, it was a struggle to drive home over the slippery streets. About that time I, too, was having my own struggle trying to get home from the theatre with all the cab drivers deserting the town down area. Miss Ethel Johnson, ex-Oregonian, and I had attended the Rex Harrison and Lilli Palmer show, "The Love of Four Colonels," and we were stunned to find how much snow had come down while we were enjoying the play. After walking three blocks, standing for 20 minutes while a bus tried to make it up a slight grade, we finally bussed homewards, but I had to walk another three blocks from the busline. The wind was stinging and the snow blinding but in spite of that I was zealous and, of course, everything was beautiful as there were still enough leaves on the trees to carry a good mantle of white. After one day of snow, beautiful clear weather returned, but I shall be able to remember the heaviest snowfall ever experienced locally so early in the fall.

The night before all this display of wintery weather, the American Newspaper Women's club sponsored a benefit performance of "Cinerama" and we were all aglow with the marvelous views of the American countryside, its national parks, its midwestern wheat-fields, its mountains and streams, canyons and lakes. With the music of the Salt Lake City choir in a stirring "America, the Beautiful," only a leaden soul or frustrated

Sen. Merrifield Talks for Mothers

Salem Heights — State Senator John Merrifield of Portland was the guest speaker on Tuesday afternoon at the Salem Heights Mothers club. He stated that Bible reading in the school is a very controversial problem.

Twelve states require it by law, nine forbid it by law and 27 are silent on the subject, as Oregon is, he reported. Senator Merrifield believes that the subject should be studied by the state and local council of churches, and that people should ask for legislation that would make Bible reading at least permissible in the schools. Church attendances have doubled in the last five years, but a lot of work has yet to be done to make this a stronger Christian nation, he said.

The conference method of reporting was discussed and conferences will begin on November 30 and will be scheduled for about a two week period. Appointments will be made convenient for parents. There is to be a conference both in the fall and spring with a complete written report at the close of school. All the teachers at Salem Heights school favor the conference method. Report cards will be sent to those parents requesting them.

It was decided to purchase games for the school, which can be used on days that rainy weather demands the students stay indoors. Reports were given on the Harvest Festival by Mrs. Hale Mickey and Mrs. Roy Miller. Mrs. Roy Gray told of the traveling trophy in the Cub Scouts, and Mrs. L. A. Clinker announced the Camp Fire and Bluebird candy sale scheduled to begin on November 15. "Safety in and Around School" are topics that will be discussed and stressed at the parents council meeting this year. Parents with problems are invited to bring them to the parents council meeting.

The attendance awards were won by Mrs. Gladys Farand's first grade with Mrs. Robert Combs as room mother, and Mrs. Maurice Fleishman's third and fourth grades with Mrs. Phil Brewster as room mother. Hospitality awards were won by Mrs. Lynn M. Hammerstad and Mrs. Harold Knittel.

Hostess chairman was Mrs. Donald Dye, room mother for Mrs. Pearl Salter's third grade and she was assisted by Mrs. Max Dolzal.

Shower Given

A shower for Mrs. R. L. Mitchell was given at the home of Mrs. Harold Comstock this week. Hostesses were Mrs. Comstock and Mrs. Jerry Com-
