DETROIT DEBRIS BECOMES STOVE WOOD

Atomic Energy For Sea Water

Whittier, Calif. (A)-Use of areas where natural water sources are scarce was proposed at a congressional hear.

The suggestion came from Joseph Applebaum, western regional director for the CIO rugged 35-year-old navy regional director for the ClO United Gas, Coke and Chemi-cal Workers. The hearing was the last in a series conducted by the House Agriculture Com-mittee during a 2,000-mile tour to determine Western senti-ment on farm problems. ment on farm problems

In a statement prepared for delivery Thursday, Applebaum said his union believes that an atomic reactor should be built "in Southern California or e'sewhere in the western area of water shortage, in order to pro-vide the estimated 500,000 kilowatts that it would take to produce one million acrefeet of fresh water from sea water at a cost that agricul-ture in the region can afford

Applebaum pointed out that one method already in use con-verts one acre foot of sea wa-ter at a cost of $32.50 to $65. This, he said, is "considerably the average costs to mu nicipalities and even under the maximum now being paid for irrigation water."

Corps of Engineers have let a contract to S. W. Gross-beck for $4,444 for cleaning and removing debris from Detroit dam reservoir. Last Sunday seekers for fuel needed in home heating were aiding the project in their stove wood project. Shown are salvagers of fuel equipped with chain saws cutting up large, wet logs into 16-inch lengths near the convenient boat ramp leading to the highway.
