CHAPTER 3

THE HUNT FOR WILLIE

When Henrietta woke the next morning the first thing she did was reach out her hand for Willie, "Willie! Willie! Here, Willie! But Willie did not come, Henrietta ran into the kitchen where the grandmama was alicing stale bread for breakfast.

"Where's Willie, grandmama?"

Grandmama said nothing, Henrietta aran to the grandpapa who was trying to start a fire to warm the kitchen. "Where's Willie?"

Grandmama said nothing.

Henrietta's heart began to thump wildly. Her voice iremined, "Mother, where is Willie?"

The mother said, "Git dressed, dear, Breakfast is ready for you."

Henrietta was filled with fear. "T want my dog!"

Henrietta was filled with fear.
"I want my dog!"

The father came into the kitchen. He looked as though he had not slept that night.

"Come here, Henrietta," he said tiredly. He drew the little girl to his lap. "I had to give the dog away, child. He was eating all we had and chewing up our clothing and—" left the house.

Still Henrietta did not come home.

At twilight when they were about to despair the door opened and there was Henrietta, white and tired and strangely old-faced.

She went to the father and said, "I am sorry I apoke so this morning, father, I know you had to do what was best for all."

Tears came to the father's eyes. He gathered Henrietta into his arms. "Colid! Childi" he whispered.

Suddenly he leaped from his chair, "Come with me! We're going to get Wille back. If there's room in this house for anyone I guess there's room for Willie!"

All the family exclaimed with excitement and relief. The brightness and the wonderful little girl look came back into Henrietta's eyes.

"I gave Wille to Mr. Murpny, the description."
