Valley Streams Are Holding, but Heavy Rains Could Be Bad

Rivers of the lower valley were holding fairly stationary Tuesday morning, but at high levels, and should heavy rains come in the next day or so come in the next day or so, there might be some serious high water troubles.

Outlook for the next five days is for more rain and slowly rising temperatures starting tonight. Snow is still piling up in the mountains and should any change come there, such as rain, there would be a runoff to add to the water already saturating the lowlands. Flood Margin Narrow
