WALTON LEAGUE PLATS BIG ROLE

Over the week-end the Oregon Division of the Izaak Walton held its annual convention, this time at Eugene. Jack League held its annual convention, this time at Eugene. Jack Binford was re-elected president, and Lyle Watts was retained for another year as secretary. Both men are from Portland We know them both very well, and we feel they will accom-plish a great deal of benefit to Oregon's outdoors during the Actually, too few people realize the extent and the nature of the work being done in Oregon and the nation by the League. The general public still thinks of the organization as a "bunch of fishermen," whereas in actuality they are dedicated as "defenders of soils, woods, waters and wildlife."

During the past year, the IWLA in Oregon has grown rapidly, and its expanding influence will in the future make Oregon

LATE DUCK HUNTING REPORTS

Beginning Friday morning, birds began flying in great quantities. However, these birds, of which a large percentage were pintails, did very little landing in our vicinity. It is thought that they consisted of birds that had been concentrated in the Columbia river country, and that the heavy storms over the week-end pushed them south. When they reached Salem, they still had a little "flying time" left, and kept right on moving.

Many hunters tell us every day that they would prefer a split season, with a smaller bag limit, but with the second half of the season extended into January. We'd like to hear what you think. Drop a note to this column, giving us your ideas and the reasons for them. We'll publish the consensus

PRESS-TIME FISHING (*) REPORT

A call to Roy Vincent, Coast Highway Cabins, at Hebo, tells us what we were pretty sure of anyway. Rivers are up—no fishing in sight this week. However, on Saturday a 20 pound six ounce steelle was taken on the Nestuces by a Mrs. T. A. Welch of McMinnvile . . . We haven't had time to check, but this may be the biggest steelle to be taken by rod and reel in Oregon.
