CHAPTER 8

HENRIETTA'S SEARCH
While Willie enjoyed himself in Santa Land Henrietta searched the city for her lost puppy.

At the very moment that Willie decided to become a flying pup, Henrietta put an advertisement in the newspaper. It said, "Lost: Brown and white puppy named Willie. And it gave Henrietta's address. But although the ad ran for three days it never found Willie.

Henrietta herself walked the streets and searched the alleys calling for Willie. When she wasn't hunting for her dog she sat on the steps of the little house where she lived and just waited.

"Someday he'll come home," she told herself. "Someday he'll come back to me. I know it."

Each night Henrietta woke up screaming, "Willie! Willie!" For it was a nightmare she had that Willie was run over or sick or hungry somewhere. And after she was really awake she would lie there for a long while and think about Willie.

Meanwhile, the family was heartbroken to see the little girl so grieved. The father blamed himself. Finally, he said, "I will buy her a new dog. A real fine pedigree dog—the best that money can buy. Such a dog will make Henrietta forget all about Willie."

"But, where will you get the money?" asked the mother.

The father was a wood chopper and he said, "I will chop more wood and earn more money."

The uncle and aunts worked in a cigar factory rolling cigars out of tobacco leaves. Now they said, "We will help you. We will roll more cigars and make more money to help buy a grand expensive champion of a dog."

The grandpa was a seller of shoes and hairpins. He went from door to door selling these things for pennies. He said: "From now on I shall go to twice as many houses and make twice as much money so that I, too, can help to buy this wonderful animal."

The father and grandpa and uncles and aunts already worked all the day long but now they worked at night, too. Very, very late, when they had come home at last, they would count the extra pennies they had earned.

While Henrietta slept they sat about the kitchen table and whispered about their plans. Then, when Henrietta woke up screaming, "Willie! Willie!" the old folks smiled and thought: "Just wait until she gets a sight of a real champion dog. She won't be calling for Willie anymore."

Finally the day came when they had enough money and the father went to the finest pet store in the town and asked to see their finest dog. The clerk showed him a grand aristocrat of a dog sitting like a king in the store window. He was big and sleek and noble and cost $100.

The father had only $20. But he said, "I've got to have this dog. I'll pay the rest a little each week. Besides that I will clean up your store every Sunday for nothing. The clerk said all right; but that way he would have to pay $110 instead of $100 for the dog. The father promised to do

Then he led the lordly dignified dog home. They were all waiting eagerly in the kitchen for him except Henrietta who was out searching for Willie as usual.

"What a royal looking animal!" exclaimed the family.

And indeed the dog was. He stared at them all proudly and there was never a quiver of his tail to show if he liked them.

"The child is coming!" whispered the father.

They heard Henrietta's slow steps crossing the porch. The door opened and the little girl came in. She stared in astonishment at the kingly dog who stood before her.

The whole family held its breath and waited.

Suddenly Henrietta burst into tears. She turned and ran from the room. The father went after her.

"He's yours, child!" pleaded the father. "We bought him for you—the finest dog in town!"

Henrietta threw herself in the father's arms. "Take him away! Take him away!" she sobbed. "This is Willie's house," wept Henrietta. "No one can ever take Willie's place!"
