Salem Honors Football Team

"The coaches are more than justly proud of every one of them," Head Coach Lee Gustafson said of the Salem high Vikings to a crowd of several hundred admirers of the 1953 football team who thronged to the armory Friday for a testimonial luncheon.

Gustafson paid tribute not only to the playing ability of his team, but to their spirit, their sportsmanship which he said was best exemplified in the one game they lost, and to their scholarship, which averaged a 3.3 better than a B average for 40 boys.

Coach Kip Taylor of Oregon State, and Ted Ogdahl of Willamette paid brief tributes to the Salem team. Assistant coaches were introduced, two of the players heard from in short talks, and the entire group of coaches and players presented with individual certificates for their feat in reaching the state semi-finals.

Mayor Al Loucks presided. The high school band played, and the entire audience rose to give a rousing Viking cheer at the finale. Bill Byers was general chairman of the event.

Raver to Quit

The statement said, however, he has not resigned from the government and will not take that step until the Seattle city council confirms his appointment as city light superintendent.

Pomeroy said the appointment will be for four years starting Jan. 1. But he said Raver will be given additional time to wind up his affairs with Bonneville.

One of his last jobs with Bonneville has been the negotiation of 20-year contracts with private utilities.

As city light superintendent, Raver would be in charge of a public utility nearly as large as the Bonneville administration. City light has plants and facilities valued at 257 million dollars, some 43 million dollars under the estimated value of Bonneville transmission lines and facilities.

The city light job pays $200 a year more than the Bonneville administrator's post.

Bohlen Urged

informal or personal reaction by Molotov but on the other hand neither did it necessarily mean that Bohlen had reported any such reaction.

Press officer Henry Suydam told newsmen that the question of what practical steps to take next to carry forward the presidential proposal "is under consideration here at the state department now and it is impossible to state what form it might take."

Changes Possible
He was reminded that President Eisenhower had presented his suggestion for the creation of an international atomic energy agency in terms of a U. N. resolution of Nov. 18 calling for private talks among the world's atomic powers on the subject, particularly Britain and America.

Suydam said that "there will be no departure from the president's outline, of course," but he made clear that the precise nature of the step, the timing and the possibility of supplementary action remained to be determined and will be influenced by the nature of Russia's reaction.

The state department instructed its top diplomats in 62 countries to call Eisenhower's speech to the attention of local governments.

Marshall Calls

1. "A careful study of all factors" which have caused wars in the past and a striving "to determine the great fundamentals which must govern a peaceful progression toward a constantly higher level of civilization."

2. Study and understanding by peoples everywhere of the differences between national groups. He suggested that principles of cooperation based on these factors might contribute to a better understanding among all nations.

3. Solving the economic problem of the "millions" who live under sub-normal conditions and who have now come to a realization that they may aspire to a fair share of the God-given rights of human beings.

"But perhaps the most important factor will be a spiritual regeneration to develop good will, faith and understanding among nations," he declared.

"And with all these," Marshall asserted, "there must be wisdom and the will to act on that wisdom."

pionage while working at Ft. Monmouth, but he refused to say whether he ever passed secret government documents to Communist spies.

McCarthy, the only member of the Subcommittee at the hearing, said he would recommend contempt action against Percoff, contending the witness could not refuse to answer such questions after stating he never had engaged in espionage.

After Percoff and Mrs. Sargent were dismissed, McCarthy said other witnesses would be heard in closed session and public hearings would be resumed in New York City next Monday.

Bid on Unit

The section from Barbur Boulevard to the connection with 99E just north of Hubbard will be open to traffic next July 1.

Widening of the four mile section to expressway width from Barbur boulevard in Portland to the Tualatin river together with the traffic interchange structures at Barbur boulevard are scheduled for completion in October 1954.

There is already a two lane highway on this stretch and the commission has contracted for construction of another two-lane roadway to conform to the expressway plan.

From the Tualatin river to the Willamette river all grading has been completed. Paving of this seven mile stretch is scheduled for completion June 30, 1954.

Williams said that it now appears that the Wilsonville bridge over the Willamette river will be completed by next May.

The connection of the expressway with Highway 99E just north of Hubbard is also expected to be completed by June 30, with the result that the section of the expressway from Barbur Boulevard to the connection with Highway 99E will be open for traffic on July 1, 1954.

Grading of the four-lane expressway from the Willamette river to Gervais is a ready under way and this section of the road and that from Gervais to Hayesville, on which contract will be let within the next week, will be completed in April of 1955, according to present estimates.

In Contract
It is planned to call for bids for paving the entire stretch of expressway from the river to Hayesville in one contract in the summer of 1954 in order that the contractors will be able to assemble equipment to begin the paving job scheduled for completion in the fall of 1955, when the entire expressway will be ready for use.

When completed the expressway between Salem and Portland will extend from a point seven miles from downtown Portland to Hayesville, three miles north of Salem. Traffic for Salem will leave the expressway, when completed, and take the four lane highway from Hayesville to the city, while through traffic will take the Salem by-pass which will have its northern terminus at Hayesville.

New Meters

Shopping Center. They were bought for better regulation of traffic in those districts and considered also was the expectation that they would add some $12,000 to city revenues annually.

Under the purchase agreement the city has to keep them at least a year.

The council voted to buy the Unimatics at a meeting last June 22.

At that meeting, after making a detailed report on several makes of meters, City Manager J. L. Franzen recommended purchase of Park-O-Meters, the same meter the city had used for several years. The bid price on this meter was $52.27 per unit.

Alderman James H. Nicholson moved that the city manager's recommendation be accepted.

Alderman Chester I. Chase said he was going to vote against accepting the manager's report because he believed in competition in all lines of business. He said he believed it would be wise to have a second make of meter on the streets, and that the city "would get better service than it had received during the past five years."

Nicholson's motion lost with six votes against it.

Alderman Dan J. Fry moved that the low bid be accepted. That was the Karpark bid, which was a unit price of $44.01. His motion carried with six affirmative votes.

Mayor Al Loucks was among those voting to approve the city manager's recommendation. The vote was by show of hands.
