Mystery Extract Will Come From Trees
 Hoquiam (AP)—Rayonier Incorporated announced Thursday plans for a plant to produce a new mystery extract from trees.
 The announcement was made by George A. Holt, resident manager of the national chemical cellulose firm's Grays Harbor division.
 The new operation, in a small Hoquiam plant, will use a low cost raw material now available in connection with chemical cellulose production in the existing plant.
 The new product is defined as extracts and chemicals, other than cellulose, found in trees. Company officials declined to disclose the exact nature of the new chemical or for what it will be used. It is known only by a laboratory number now.
