WILLAMETTE NOTES

Finals Loom Late This Month for WU Students

By BARBARA JACKSON
Capital Journal Correspondent

Willamette students returned from vacation over the holidays this week, and classes resumed at 8 a.m. Monday.

January is social dead month on the campus, and no social activities have been scheduled in lieu of the fact that final examinations will be given at the end of the month. UNESCO's Endeavor, a publication of student work, will be out next semester, according to editor Judi Wood of Salem. Original student essays and poetry were submitted to a faculty committee. The theme of this year's book will be "The United Nations," with the accent on the world's cultural, social and political conditions.

The first student recital of 1954 will be tomorrow afternoon in the Music recital hall at 3 o'clock. The public is invited to attend. Five numbers, "Come Again, Sweet Love," "Stay, Time, Awhile They Flying," "What Needeth All This Travail," "April Is in My Mistress' Face," and "Sing We and Chant It," will be presented by the Willamette singers. Myrth Loring of Milwaukie will play

"Bromo Volcano," a piano solo, and Lorraine Katje of Chehalis, Wash., will play "Night Visions." Marilyn Hanthorn will play a violin solo, and Lisbeth Shield of Castletford, Ida., will accompany Lollie Coffey of Portland in two vocal numbers, "Lullaby" and "Life."

Tuesday, during convocation, the Willamette university band will present its last concert before the band tour. An art display of Fred Cummings of Woodburn is being featured this and next week in the little gallery of the art building. Included in the display are paintings, sculpturing and a mobile.

JoAnn Curry and Carol Litchfield of Newport, both of whom were seriously injured in the auto accident over Thanksgiving vacation, have been reported out of danger and have returned to their homes.

Receipts from the class carnival for the challenge fund show that $250 was earned for the effort. To date, student contribution has almost reached the $2000 mark.
