Saturday, January 16th when KOIN-TV telecast RFD of the p.m.

The program, to be presented weekly, features KOIN-TV's agricultural consultant, William E. Drips, presenting latest farm news and information from the Oregon State College Extension Service, the State Department of Agriculture, Federal Agricultural Agencies and from County Agents. Films, stills and interviews with leaders and personalities will highlight current farm activities. Market information illustrated by graphs and specially prepared charts will be included regularly, as will illustrated farm weather forecasts by KOIN-TV's own weather authority, Meteorologist Bob Lynott.

William E. ("Bill") Drips, who plans and emcees the show, is a nationally known farm information specialist with more than 25 years experience as agricultural journalist and Director of Agriculture for the National Broadcasting Company. He also pioneered NBC's agricultural television programs in 1947.

Cooperation Is Wisest, Mrs. Lord Tells Listeners On Sugar Beets

Mrs. Lord urged the necessity of continuation of the pressure concerning the release of prisoners of war. In this connection, she said that Russia and her satellite nations were the worst offenders, although other countries were not free of guilt.

The speaker credited the Unit-ed States with the clearing up of a "ticklish" Burma situation when nationalist Chinese forces were induced to leave that country after they had made an uninvited appearance there.

In the technical assistance por tion of the United Nations' over-all program, Mrs. Lord sketched the manner in which many coun-tries are sending various skilled persons into the backward nations where they are educating the na-tives in various branches of in-dustry and agriculture.

"They are setting up pilot plants, so that the people may learn to help themselves," she de-

Lord, New York City, told an audience of some 300 persons, predominantly women, in Waller hall Wednesday night that "our wisest course is to cooperate with friendly nations and continue efforts to improve conditions of life everywhere."

Speaking as a representative on the U.N. commission on human rights, Mrs. Lord said she welcomed constructive criticism of the organization.

"Destructive criticism," she added, is based on a lack of knowledge of the facts."

Mrs. Lord urged the necessity of continuation of the pressure concerning the release of prisoners of war. In this connection, the content of the U.N. general assembly, the content of the urgent of
