Jaycees Install At Woodburn

WOODBURN — Charles Cornwell, manager of the Ringo-Cornwell Funeral chapel, was honored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce Thursday night at a banquet meeting in the Legion hall as Woodburn's Junior First Citizen.

The citation was presented by Harlan Roth, Silverton, district vice president.

Others presented with achievement awards were Harold Livesay, Marshall Barbour and Vernon Eaden.

Sig Unander, state treasurer, was the principal speaker.

New officers of the Woodburn Junior Chamber of Commerce installed during the evening were: Gilbert Ramage, president; Robert Sawtelle, first vice president; Harold Livesay, second vice president; Al Ringo, secretary; E. A. Buchanan, treasurer, and L. H. Hildebrandt, state director.

Garden Center Case Argued

The City Park Advisory Board Thursday night gave tentative approval to a proposal of the Salem Garden Council to convert the barn at Bush House into a community garden center. More information is wanted before final approval is recommended to the City Council.

City Manager J. L. Franzen told the board that the building is now used for storage of park equipment, for which no other building is available.

Park board members wanted to know about cost of maintenance. David Cameron, president of the garden council, indicated the garden council would finance the initial conversion, but thought the city should maintain the project later.

Cameron said the garden council would move a garage building to a connection with the barn, make the first floor into an exhibition room, while the second floor would be for meetings and storage.

HEAT WAVE BROKEN BUENOS AIRES (UP)—The temperature here dropped to a cool, moist 70 degrees yesterday, when rain broke the worst heat wave so far of the South American summer. On Wednesday, the mercury reached a peak of 94 degrees.

Life-Saving Serum Race Successful

Lewiston, Idaho (AP)—An airline, an Idaho sheriff and two Washington State patrolmen teamed Thursday to race life-saving serum to a woman in serious condition in a Walla Walla hospital after a caesarian operation for delivery of a baby boy.

Sheriff W. W. Hays, reporting the dramatic race against time and the elements, said the serum was placed aboard a Walla Walla bound West Coast Airlines plane when doctors reported it was needed for Mrs. Donald Pugnetti of Pasco, Wash.

A snowstorm kept the plane from landing at Walla Walla, however, and it flew on to Lewiston. After contacting the Washington State Patrol, Hays met the plane at the airport here, and started the race to Walla Walla. He was met about 15 miles west of Lewiston by State Patrolman Don Huber who took charge of the serum for the second lap. Patrol Sgt. Loy Kennedy met Huber southwest of Pomeroy and completed the mission. Mrs. Pugnetti was reported "somewhat improved" at Walla Walla late Thursday.

No Political Ban On Oregon Teachers

Atty. Gen. Robert Y. Thornton ruled Thursday that teachers in Oregon's colleges, high schools and grade schools aren't subject to any restrictions of the political activities.

The opinion was for Monroe Sweetland, Democratic national committeeman.

School Bus Service Grows

School bus service in Oregon has grown into a five million dollar a year business, A. Harvey Wright, state director of school transportation, says.

The cost of operating school buses now is five times what it was 10 years ago.

The big increase is caused by many more school children, increased operating and equipment costs, and the fact that many districts have consolidated and thus increased the distance children have to go to school.

In 1952, the state's 729 transporting school districts hauled 123,850 pupils at a cost of $4,633,145.

That is double the cost in 1946. The 1941 total was $1,078,351, and it was only $888,974 in 1936.

The state pays about a third of the school transportation cost, with the districts paying the rest.

Ivan Bloch to Speak Monday

Ivan Bloch, industrial consultant of Portland, will speak on industry and its growth in the northwest at the Chamber of Commerce luncheon meeting Monday.

Bloch is well known in Salem, having spoken here a number of times, and he was of assistance in bringing the alumina-from-clay plant here in war days.

He is a graduate electrical engineer and was chief of industrial and resources development at Benneville, and later was consultant to the secretary of the interior.

He began a private practice in Portland in 1947, and last year the Philippine and United States governments got his services to launch an industrialization program in the islands. Some years ago he served as member and consultant to Governor Douglas McKay's Oregon Industrial Development Committee.

Dimes March Defies Weather

SILVERTON — The Junior Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring the March of Dimes project and making excellent headway, even though weather conditions have been against the usual "block of dimes" program.

At the Palace theater, Wednesday at 8 p.m., the local Moose lodge will put on a talent show. Al Rasmussen, theater proprietor, is giving the use of the theater. All money received will go into the polio prevention fund.

Thursday, January 28 is the PTA Mothers March from 7 to 8 p.m., to call at porch-light invitations, with the area to extend into adjacent thickly settled areas for collections as well as in the local residential district.

The Saturday, January 30 block of dimes feature will be by the Rotarians. Dr. Robert Mallorie is chairman.

Bill Hanson has an unusual display of newspaper stories that have boosted his campaign, including the Capital Journal front page picture of the family of Pastor Joseph A. Luthro. The kiddies, Kenneth and Melna, 3 and 5 years of age, and their daddy are greeting the mother, a polio patient, through the Silverton hospital window. Mrs. Luthro is now at home, and managing the household.

75 on Foot Car Victims

Pedestrian-motor vehicle accidents claimed 75 lives in Oregon last year, Secretary of State Earl T. Newbry said today.

The figure means, he said, that Oregon has posted a pedestrian death reduction for two straight years. Eighty-eight were killed in 1951 and 81 in 1952.

Newbry said the year offered a "freak" pedestrian accident experience because more than half the deaths occurred during the first six months. Generally, the latter months of the year are considered the most dangerous for pedestrians due to longer hours of darkness.
