Livestock Association Moves in Here Monday

By CLAUDE STEUSLOFF

Western Oregon Livestock association members moved into Salem Monday for their three-day annual meeting at the Senator hotel. It will be the largest livestock gathering of the year in the Willamette valley, with 250 persons expected.
 Formal sessions start at 1 p.m. with words of welcome by Mayor Al Loucks. Roger Dumdi, McMinville stockman, president of the association, is to follow with his address. Seven standing committees and several special groups will conduct deliberations during the afternoon.
 The Monday evening program at 7:30 is built around a lamb-cutting demonstration by Miles Teneyck, Portland marketman. The finished specimens of Teneyck's knife artistry will be distributed to the audience.
 Tuesday business sessions will feature three panel discussions. At 10 a.m., E. L. Potter of Corvallis will lead the livestock marketing group. Panel members include: Prosser Clark, commission man; Ed Coles, marketing specialist; D. W. Chambers, packer; Earl Drury, swine grower; Harry Harbert, cattlemaster; Claude Steusloff, sheepman; Charles Swango, cattlemaster, and Lorin Woody, rancher.
 Governor Paul Patterson is to address the association at 11:30 Tuesday.
 State Senator Howard Belton will lead a taxation discussion during the afternoon session. Panel members will be Sam Stewart, state tax commissioner; Lial Winney, rancher; Albert Julian, rancher, and Cornelius Bateson, berrygrower.

Also on the afternoon program will be a pasture management panel led by Arnold Ebert, of K. O. A. C. Members are to be Glen Hawkins, swine grower; Ronald Hogg, sheepraiser; Joe Johnson, O. S. C.; Glen Martin, cattlemaster; Lyle McKinley, swine grower; Dr. Peterson, state veterinarian; Lorin Smith, sheepman, and Hubert Willoughby, cattlemaster.
 Salem Singers, a 20-man chorus led by Francis Wenderley, will be featured at the Tuesday evening banquet in the Capitol room. Hubert Aspinwall, the cowboy, mail carrier, and Bob Payne, nontomist, also are on the entertainment program, which has been arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Bubb.
