By JAMES D. OLSON
Steps are being taken in Nebraska to abolish that state's unicameral Legislature and return to a two-house body. The one-house legislature has been in operation in Nebraska for 16 years with sessions held biennially.

Keizer

KEIZER—Keizer school will participate again in the Oregon Statesman-KSLM spelling contest this spring. Three students were selected from each of the six periods in the 7th and 8th grades.

Mrs. Weddle then conducted an examination for elimination in the conference room on Jan. 15. Mary Olson will represent Keizer school in the district contest. Lynn Conklin placed second and Carol Harland third. Runnersup were Stephen Billings, Lynda Lawrence, Charles Johnson and Sally Cook.

Womans Anger Turns To Tears Through Miss

SPOKANE — Mrs. Heather A. McHugh's anger turned to tears Friday night when she grabbed a dish and took a mighty backswing to throw it at her husband.

Her arm went through a window just behind her. She was taken to a hospital for care of damaged tendons, artery and vein in her wrist.

Veterans Get First Chance

Veterans of World War II and subsequent military duty have first priority in the acquisition of 82 farm units being opened by the bureau of reclamation in the South Columbia basin irrigation project in Washington. It was reported today by the Oregon Department of Veterans' Affairs.

To receive priority, veterans must apply to the bureau of reclamation offices at Ephrata, Wash., by February 19, 1954. Their military service must have been between September 16, 1940, and July 3, 1952.

To qualify, a veteran must have had two full years of farming experience since age 15 and must have assets of $4,500 in excess of liabilities.

The 82 farm units range in size from 40 to 148 irrigable acres and in price from $1,120 to $4,980, with most of them listed between $1,500 and $2,000.

The farms are located about 15 miles north of Pasco and 130 miles southwest of Spokane. The bureau of reclamation expects to deliver the first water from the Grand Coulee canal system to the farm unit in 1955.

Application forms may be obtained from county veterans' service officers, from the state veterans' department in Salem or Portland, or by writing to the reclamation office in Ephrata, Wash.

Pamphlets Published About Civil Rights

Nine new pamphlets on civil rights subjects went out this week from the Oregon Bureau of Labor to each of 10 school and public libraries in Marion County.

Forty-two pieces of such literature have now been made available by the labor department in its Intergroup Relations Resource Book to 250 libraries throughout the state.

The resource information is kept current as part of the educational program conducted under the State Fair Employment Practices Act which prohibits job discrimination because of race, creed, color or national origin.

W. S. Van Meter, director of the program, states that Marion County with only five percent of non-whites in its population, also has its religious and national minorities as does every section of Oregon. The program hopes to enlist the aid of every community in abolishing prejudices toward all minority groups.

A study of state legislation on fair employment practices shows that Oregon is one of the nine states having truly enforceable FEP laws.

Hatfield has Suggestion for Location of New Institution

Construction of the proposed intermediate institution on or adjacent to the state fair grounds in Salem was suggested in a letter to the state board of control by State Representative Mark Hatfield of Salem.

In his letter, Rep. Hatfield pointed out that the fair grounds is used by the general public only two weeks in each year and said that during that time the inmates could be locked up but could maintain and rehabilitate the fair grounds and buildings during the remainder of the year.

"With the talent that probably would be available," Hatfield said in his letter, "under proper direction, the state fair grounds could well become even more of a beauty spot and even more functional than it is now."

Other than building and grounds maintenance Hatfield suggested that vegetable gardens and small orchards could be developed in the future on this site to help sustain the institution.

"If this is properly done in cooperation with the state department of agriculture and Oregon State college," he added, "these projects could well become valuable demonstration areas at the same time cut institutional costs."

Hatfield was frank that his plan might prove impractical, stating that he was throwing out the idea "without consulting anyone."

"Should that prove so after a fair trial, the building could well serve for state fair purposes alone, as a 4-H dormitory, exhibit building or as an annex for one of our other state institutions."

Hatfield was chairman of the house committee on state and federal affairs in the 1953 session. He is a professor of political science and dean of students at Willamette university.

Deadline Set for Entries for Glee

Words and music to be presented in the Freshman Glee, Willamette University campus production, must be available no later than March 3, according to a deadline that has been established.

The 46th annual songfest will be presented March 20 under the general direction of William Wheat, freshman from Milton-Freewater. A new point system has been adopted for judging this year's Glee. A total of 240 points may be earned in the presentation department and 120 points for words and music.

Theme for this year's Glee is "Fight."

Women Lead Among Donors

Women are leading the men by a ratio of almost two to one in Willamette University students' contributions to the "challenge fund," according to latest tabulations by Kent Holmes, general manager for the effort.

The students are endeavoring to raise $10,000 to be turned into the general challenge fund of a half million dollars. Contributions to date have passed the $2500 mark and renewed efforts will be made to secure $5000 by mid-February.

Two Willamette University benefactors, whose names have not been revealed, each gave $250,000 providing an additional $500,000 could be secured. The money is to be used in the construction of a woman's dormitory and a combined fine arts and auditorium building.
