SNOWS COME TO THEM

Because their mothers all work, these children of the Holy Family Nursery Home in San Francisco, never get the opportunity to travel to the snow covered mountains. So John Mortiz of Squaw Valley near Lake Tahoe 206 miles away filled his truck with snow and brought it to the youngsters. The kids, who never saw snow before, didn't have to be told what to do with it. The snowballs were soon flying (UP Telephoto)

Below Zero In Midwest

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Montana, port of entry and reservoir of the nation's cold weather for nearly two weeks, Monday had sub-zero temperatures for the 12th consecutive day.

While scattered snow accompanied readings ranging down to Great Falls' 28 below and Lewiston's and Cutbank's 23 below, a full scale snowstorm struck to the south, in Utah.

The snowfall continued after depositing as much as 16 inches at Randolph near the Wyoming line in Northwest Utah, closing two major highways and making others dangerous to use, and posing the menace of snowslides. Earlier the storm left lesser amounts of snow through Southern Idaho and Northern Nevada.

The zero temperature area included the Dakotas and Minnesota early Monday. Freezing temperatures were prevalent as far south as Southern Oklahoma. There was drizzle in the Ohio Valley, the Eastern Great Lakes region, and rain in Southern California.
