Big Game With UO Awaited

By ALICE LEHMAN (Capital Journal Correspondent) OREGON STATE COLLEGE, Corvallis (Special)—Snow and rain have put quite a damper on activities here at Oregon State. The new type of extra curricular activities which seem to be the most popular is snowball fights. Some of them became such battles that several fraternities are now being faced with fines. All in all the weather is providing a very exciting winter term.

The crucial basketball series with the University of Oregon is on the agenda for this coming week-end. Friday night the game will be in Gill Coliseum and the Saturday night game will be played at McArthur court in Eugene. We're all hoping to sweep the series, but only time will tell.

Friday night following the game, here, in Corvallis, the Associated Women Students are sponsoring a carnival to be in the armory. Carnival booths of all types will be set up and run by the various women's living groups. The title of the carnival is "Mother Goose Midway" and all booths will be decorated accordingly. Special prizes will be given and the men may compete in the tall tale contest. All prizes have been donated by Corvallis and Portland merchants.

Alpha Sigma Phi, national social fraternity, recently elected officers for the coming year: Bob Rubie of Salem was elected associate editor. Among initiations these past few weeks has been that for the Alpha Phis, initiated into this sorority was Beverly Mott, Salem.

Plans are under way for the forthcoming Dad's Week-end which will be February 12 and 13. Tomorrow's Barometer, a student newspaper, will be a special issue for dads. It will tell all about the games, luncheon and other details of the week-end. Students are being urged to send copies of these to their fathers, so OSC dads, if you don't get one soon write your son or daughter and ask for one, because you won't want to miss this big week-end!
