Whisker Derby For Centennial

SILVERTON — Each meeting of the week on Tuesday evenings, of Lowell Brown and his general committee personnel of five, brings to light something of historical interest, and plans for the August 4-8, 1954, Silverton Centennial observance.

Just recently decided, the "whisker" race is to begin in May, with awards handed out during the centennial week.

For business men or those in certain professions, where no levity should be asked, instead of being urged to enter this contest, a donation will be accepted. Those included would be ministers or funeral directors who will carry a release from "unofficial arrest."

Silverton has an active business man, J. D. Drake, a member of a pioneer family, a historian, and for many years, a photographer and collector.

Drake tells of the Waldo Hills as "a first" in the planting of Oregon wheat. To quote: "Daniel Waldo, a Virginian, arrived with his family and settled in the Waldo Hills in the fall of 1843.

Mr. Waldo brought with him a herd of cattle and a quantity of wheat which he planted that same fall, 1843.

This was the first wheat field sown in the Oregon country. In 1844, he built a log house, "dog-trot style," and in 1853 he built a large two-story house that still stands and is used by the Fred Gaffin family.

The Waldo donation land claim is still intact. It is the only 640-acre original government land claim within this vicinity that has not been sub-divided, excepting for a small corner given to the Macleay grange. The land is owned by Jack Minto of Salem.

The Waldo Hills take their name from Daniel Waldo."

Jobless List Shows Increase

Last week's snow and ice caused a sudden rise in Oregon's already severe unemployment, the State Unemployment Compensation Commission reported Friday.

Total civilian employment was estimated at 59,800,000 for the week ended Jan. 9. That was about one million below the December level, the Census Bureau reported.

The bureau said that unemployment "nearly always rises sharply" after Christmas and that the increase this year was "only slightly greater" than in most other years since World War II.

Most of the increase in unemployment occurred in construction and factory jobs, where unemployment ran about 450,000 above last January's level.

About 3.8 per cent of all civilian workers were jobless early this month, compared to three per cent a year ago. But the percentage of unemployed still was smaller than at the start of most other post-war years, the bureau said.

Pool on OCE Campus to Be Wolverton Memorial

OREGON COLLEGE, Monmouth — A bequest of approximately $75,000 in the will of Grant S. Wolverton, graduate of Oregon College of Education in 1883, will be used to construct a swimming pool at the college in Monmouth, according to Dr. Roben J. Maaske, OCE president.

Decision to select the pool as a memorial to Mr. Wolverton's parents, John and Mary Wolverton, was made by a committee of three specified in the will and consisted of two nieces, Mrs. Clarice L. Mackey and Mrs. Grace Leto Daniel of Portland, and President Roben L. Maaske. The parents were pioneer residents of Monmouth and John Wolverton was a trustee of early Christian college predecessor of Oregon College of Education.

The Wolverton Memorial Pool will be constructed as an addition on the west side of the present physical education building at the college and will be enclosed to permit continuous use throughout the year for swimming instruction and recreation. Present plans call for completing the project sometime next fall or winter.

The Portland firm of Wick and Hilgers was designated as architects for the project at a meeting of the State Board of Higher Education this week in Portland.

Grant S. Wolverton passed away on April 13, 1951, and his will has been under probate proceedings in court during the interim period. It is expected that a final accounting of assets accruing to OCE as the residuary legatee in the will, will be made within the next month or so.

The Wolverton family lived for many years on the present OCE campus in the residence now in use as the Music Hall.

Cold storage holdings of pork have dropped off sharply compared to a year ago. On January 1 the reserve supply of pork was down nearly 30 per cent and was the smallest since 1947.
