Real Confusion Over Bricker Amendment

WASHINGTON — Public confusion over the Bricker amendment was pretty general before the Senate started debate on it last week. Now the confusion is compounded.

The proposal by Sen. Bricker (R-Ohio) to amend the Constitution seems dead in the form he offered it.

The question now is: Will the Senate approve any kind of amendment, at all and, if so, what kind? Bricker's amendment, as he proposed it, would restrict the scope of treaties made by the President with Senate approval and the power of the President by himself to make executive agreements with other countries.

First question: Is such an amendment necessary? Constitutional lawyers argue over that. Second question: If some kind of restriction is necessary, does the Bricker amendment go too far?

The dispute got so tangled in constitutional law, American history, Supreme Court decisions, old treaties, the foresight or lack of it among the framers of the Constitution, possible future events, benign or dire, past occurrences, human intentions and the fallibility of senators and presidents yet unborn that no one could claim with unassailable assurance to know the answer.

President Eisenhower started the Bricker amendment bleeding from all pores when he publicly said he was unalterably opposed to it. That chilled the ardor of some of Bricker's supporters in the Senate.

Eisenhower protested the Bricker amendment would tie him and this country's conduct of foreign affairs in knots. But he said he would not oppose some other kind of amendment, provided it met with his approval.

The Eisenhower position was enough to split Senate Republicans into those who still stuck with the Ohioan and those who would do whatever the President wished.

Then Sen. George (G-a) came up with an amendment of his own. This got a lot of support from Senate Democrats, New Sen. Kefauver (D-Tenn.) and some other

Kills Three of Family, Then Self

RICHLAND, Wash. — Three members of a Richland family were cut down in a burst of gunfire from a rifle wielded by an unemployed Hanford atomic plant worker Monday, who then turned the weapon on himself.

Benton County coroner J. J. Albertowicz said it was a case of "triple murder and suicide." The victims were identified as Joseph V. Naranjo, 41, the gun wielder; his wife, Betty, also 41; their adopted daughter, Dorothy, 3; and Mrs. Naranjo's father, Marion Bowers, 75.

Naranjo, a 25-20 caliber rifle at his side, was found in the family's small home near the Richland "Y," a road junction between Richland and Kennewick.

Also found in the home were the bodies of Bowers and the little girl. They were both in bed. The man had been shot twice, the girl once.

Mrs. Naranjo's body was found on a dirt road outside the family home. There was a small knife still clutched in her hand. Harry Cochran, Benton County sheriff, said he believed the woman had grabbed the knife in a vain attempt to ward off her husband.

She had been shot twice, once in the back and once in the head. Cochran said the Naranjo woman apparently was running to a neighbors house for help when she was slain.

The only known surviving member of the family, a 12-year-old son, Robert, was attending school at the time of the shooting.

The sheriff's office said Naranjo had been employed at the atomic plant until about a month ago and that the family had been living on unemployment compensation since then.

They said Naranjo had borrowed money from neighbors for food and a car license.

Albertowicz said there was alcohol on Naranjo's breath, "even after death."

In normal times, Indonesia exports more rubber than is consumed in the United States, Indonesian government officials say.

Reclamation Funds Sought

WASHINGTON (AP)—Chairman Miller (R-Neb.) of the House Interior Committee demanded Tuesday that the Budget Bureau prepare a supplemental budget request for funds to begin new irrigation and reclamation projects.

Miller said he was "quite disturbed over the arbitrary manner" he said the bureau showed in considering Interior Department recommendations for "new starts."

Miller said that 18 projects in 10 states, many of which had been authorized by Congress, had been cut from the Interior Department's request for appropriations. He did not list them.

Miller said that Chairman Hugh Butler (R-Neb.) of the Senate Interior Committee will also ask the Budget Bureau to prepare a supplement appropriation request for new reclamation projects.

Petitions Ask May Grid Vote

Petitions flatly asking the Salem city council to abolish the one-way street grid or put the issue on the May ballot are now being circulated on the Business Men's committee that launched an attack on the grid several weeks ago.

The first petitions circulated could be signed by anyone. Those now in circulation are a response to doubt said to have been expressed by city council members that a majority of the downtown merchants wanted the grid abolished.

Only one of the new petitions has completed its circulation, said A. R. Mefford, chairman of the committee. This covered the block bounded by State, Court, Liberty and High streets, and was signed by 90 per cent of the business men in the block, according to Mefford. The others, as planned, will be completed in time for presentation to the city council Monday night and at that time it is the hope of the petitioners to get a bill introduced to put the question on the May ballot.

Under state law the council has the authority, on its own initiative, to put a measure on the ballot, but if initiated by petition of the people it could not go on the ballot until November.

Hundreds See Art Museum

A total of 2400 persons from 24 states have visited Bush House since it was opened last October. It was reported at the annual board meeting of the Salem Art association Monday night.

The board elected Willard Marshall president of the association; David Duniway, Miss Elizabeth Lord, Mrs. Ralph E. Purvine and Donald McCargar, vice-presidents; Mrs. James Walton, secretary; Mrs. Breyman Boise, treasurer; and Miss Edith Schryver, liaison officer between the association and the Salem Park board and garden council.

Chosen as directors of the association were Hugh Morrow, Miss Schryver, Dan J. Fry, Mrs. Merrill D. Ohling, Mrs. Chester Cox, Mrs. Walter Kirk, Mrs. Clifford Farmer, Mrs. Keith Powell and Stewart Johnson.

Logging Firm Sues Plywood Co.

PORTLAND — The West Fork Logging Co. of Douglas County has filed a $297,484 suit against the Multnomah Plywood Corp. here. West Fork contends in the suit that the plywood firm agreed earlier to pay the cost of roads built to transport logs out of the woods. West Fork asks $119,000 claimed due on road construction costs and $11,494 for logs which it contends have been delivered to Multnomah Plywood but which have not been paid for.

West Fork also asks $176,000, as profit had logging not been halted.

Powers Creek Club Will Demonstrate

Do's and Don'ts of Demonstrations will be the theme of a day-long meeting at Mayflower hall, Thursday, February 4, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. for all Marion county 4-H leaders.

Actual demonstrations will be presented and discussed as well as covering all problems concerning demonstrations. The Powers Creek Livestock club, led by John Miller, Silverton, will give a team demonstration. Other clubs are encouraged to come and give practice demonstrations also, but should contact the 4-H club office before that day, said Bea Humphries, 4-H agent.

Coffee will be furnished, so plan to bring a sack lunch and stay all day.
