

DISCUSS TURKEY PROBLEMS

Peace Time Prosperity for Turkey Industry Predicted

LEBANON—"National economy was higher in 1953 than any peace-time year in the nation's history; the transition from war to peace production will continue through 1954 but it will not become acute and this will be one of our best peace years," Vice-President Harold M. Phillips of the First National Bank of Portland told a large audience of turkey growers and local businessmen Wednesday.

Home Safety Health Topic

Janice Westaby, consultant on health education for the Oregon State Board of Health, spoke to the Marion County Health Department staff Thursday morning on the board's home safety program.

Miss Westaby told of the three-year home safety program being initiated by the state board. This program was made possible by a grant of money for this purpose by the Kellogg company.

There were 333 home accident fatalities in Oregon in 1952, according to Miss Westaby, as compared to only 20 deaths caused by polio. Burns caused most of the deaths in children up to 14 years old. More children in this age group die from burns than from all the communicable diseases combined.

She recommended that people be more careful around the home, eliminating hazards and exercising precautions. Miss Westaby addressed the group on crutches, but claimed that the injury was due to a skiing accident—not a home accident.

LEBANON CONSTRUCTION

LEBANON — A strong upward swing in residential construction was noted here during January. Building permits totaled $25,825, and included three homes costing $20,000; four residences to be remodeled, $4,725; one private garage, $600, and remodeling another garage to cost $500.

Butter for Schools Not To be Short

Premature fears that school kitchens and cafeterias of Oregon would be without butter before the month is over were allayed this week with the arrival of a shipment from southern California of three carloads of the surplus commodity, Mrs. Laura P. Wells, director of the school lunch program for the State Department of Education said today.

And with this announcement Mrs. Wells disclosed that for the school children of Oregon, the little lunch is big business. The Department of Education gets a vast allowance of surplus commodities from the U. S. Department of Agriculture and this in turn is distributed to 650 kitchens and cafeterias in Oregon to assure that more than 96,000 school youngsters get nourishing lunches through the school year.

Scouts Take Lessons In Mobilization

Six Salem Boy Scouts, were in Portland Saturday for the third in a series of eight lessons in emergency mobilization. The youths, who are accompanied each Saturday by Master Sgt. Robert Howard from the Air Force ROTC detachment at Willamette University, this week will receive instruction in physical fitness from Staff Sgt. C. E. Wheaton, USMC, during which period they will run a mile in seven and a half minutes and climb an 18 foot rope hand over hand without use of their legs and feet in 25 seconds.

The physical fitness instruction will be followed by a lesson in emergency skills and emergency messenger service and at the close of the day the boys will take their final fitness examination from Capt. Charles W. Mann. Transportation for the boys is furnished by the AFROTC at Willamette.
