2 Big Six Tilts Left For Salem

By PAUL HARVEY, III
The Salem Vikings downed the Springfield Millers 65-56 at Salem Saturday night to keep the Vikings' hopes alive of moving into second place in the Big Six. Tuesday the Vikings travel to Albany to meet the Bulldogs for the second time this year, then will finish the Big Six slate here Friday against Eugene.

Saturday night the Vikings led almost all the way to defeat the Millers for the second time this year. Salem took an early 6-0 lead on field goals by Jim Knapp, Tom Pickens, and Bob Wulf and led until two minutes remained in the first quarter.

49-41 at Halftime
Then Skip Squires sank a field goal to tie the score at 14-14 with two minutes left. Phil Burkland put the home team in front for good with a field goal. In the first period Jim Knapp led Salem with eight points while Tom Bourgeois had seven for the Millers.

Burkland's seven markers in the second quarter led the Vikings to a 23-point period and they extended their 18-14 first quarter lead to 41-49 at halftime. Burkland and Knapp had 11 in the first half.

A slow third quarter for the Millers and 14 points by the Salem squad extended Salem's lead to 55-33 at the end of three quarters. The Millers could get but four points, all by Bourgeois.

Closed Gap on Reserve
Springfield, coached by Roger Wiley, closed the gap in the last quarter with Salem reserves in most of the period as Warren Dixon sparked the Millers to a 23-point quarter. Salem got nine with five by Herb Triplett.

Knapp was high for the winners with 16 while Burkland had 14. Center Bourgeois came through with 15 for the Millers. Each team had 22 field goals but Salem had the edge on free throws with 20 to Springfield's 12.

Salem Jayvees Win
A red-hot Salem high junior varsity trounced Springfield's JV's 84-48 in the preliminary game. Lee Gustafson's Salem squad led all the way. After holding a 36-31 halftime lead they scored 48 points in the last half.

Bob Tom was high for the Salem JV's with 15 while Marv Rhine had 14 and Bob Foreman had 13. For the Millers Morris had 10 and Estes had eight. Salem had a 403 average as they hit 31 field goals.

Seattle Acquires Pitcher Bearden

SEATTLE — Gene Bearden, former Cleveland Indian pitcher, Saturday was acquired by the Seattle Rainiers of the Coast League in a deal that sent shortstop Alex Garbowski and pitcher Art El Duca to Charleston of the American Assn.

Bearden performed for Oakland of the PCL in 1948 and 1947 before moving up to the majors in 1948, when he won 20 and lost seven for the Indians. He since has seen service with Washington, Detroit, St. Louis and the Chicago White Sox.

HARVEY STOREY ... with Cubs in 1941

SALEM MANAGER ... with Padres in 1949

By A. C. JONES

Salem baseball followers will begin learning the Harvey Storey story Wednesday evening, starting with an introduction to 250 at a welcome dinner and developing into a real friendship as the new manager guides the fortunes of the 1954 Senators.

The banquet, at 6:30 at the Marjion hotel, will find the 37-year-old veteran of 18 baseball seasons telling his plans and hopes for his second season as player-manager. This next season he will be working under a general manager, Hugh Luby, against whom he played seven years in the Pacific Coast League.

Storey Signed at 19
Storey and Luby have a lot in common in their careers besides wanting a winning team. Luby's first year in the PCL was 1937 with Oakland, while Storey, signed at 19 by Portland to be farmed out, began his slugging for San Francisco in 1938. Both were infielders.

Each saw military service with the Navy and each had a fling at the major leagues.

Storey, now 37, brings a potent bat with him, an ability which earned him PCL all-star berths in 1946, 1947 and 1948 with Portland. He led the league in hitting in 1946 with .326, led in doubles in 1947 and was runner-up in runs batted in, 119, being elbowed out by a grand slam homer hit by Max West of San Diego on the last day of the season.

His tours around the circuit have had him playing with the Seals, Los Angeles, Portland and San Diego, plus stints with Tacoma the first year of the Western International in 1937, with Milwaukee and Tulsa and a couple seasons with semipro clubs.

Storey was a high school star in baseball, football and track at Forest Grove when the talent hunters noticed his hitting ways. After one semester at Pacific university's baseball diamond he worked out one night with the Portland Beavers and was signed at 19, with his parents' permission, in 1935 for the 1936 season. Bill Cissell was the Beaver manager.

Helped Initiate WIL
After 1936 spring training young Storey found himself playing in the Vancouver, B.C., semipro league which preceded the WIL. Four clubs in Vancouver played four or five times a week and were about Class C or B quality. Bob Brown, later WIL president, promoted the semipro league in which Storey was leading hitter at .354.

He finished the year with Portland, pennant winner. After 1937 spring training, Portland sent Storey to Tacoma, where he played short and third in the first WIL year, batting .347. Portland found it couldn't buy him back from Tacoma because of a ruling by Commissioner Judge Landis and had to place him on waivers.

San Francisco purchased Storey outright for 1938, where he saw limited service at short, third and outfield because of an injury which kept him out for a month.

What proved to be his best year found Storey playing regular shortstop in 1938 with the Seals, where he whanged the ball at a .331 clip for Manager Lefty O'Doul, fourth highest in the league.

Broke Leg in Chicago
Sold to the Chicago Cubs at the end of the season for 1941 delivery, Storey stayed with the Seals in 1940 only to meet with an accident which put a crimp in his promising career. June 2 he broke his left leg by sliding back to first base, closing his season early and hampering his efforts for a couple of years or more because of a faulty job of setting the bone. On the same "Frisco team were Dominic DiMaggio, Ted Norbert and Brooks Holder.

In spring training in 1941 with the Cubs, Storey learned from an X-ray that the small bone above his ankle had been split down, so that he could play only spasmodically with Los Angeles that year, hitting .280, on option from Chicago.

The Milwaukee club, then owned by Bill Veeck, bought Storey in 1942 and he went to Tulsa in the Texas league after a month, where the hot weather helped his leg tremendously. Storey played every inning of 124 games, hitting .299 or .301 as shortstop, third and left field.

Then Came the War
War and the Navy claimed his time for 1943, 1944 and 1945 and used him on service baseball teams, and he was carried on the Los Angeles roster. Reporting to the Angels in 1946, he started the season and then something happened which allowed him to show up the judgment of the Los Angeles management.

They released Storey and Portland signed him, so all he did in Beaver uniform was win the PCL batting crown with .326. It wasn't until after the last game, in which he got four for six, that he discovered he won the title under Manager Marv Owen.

With Portland in 1947, Storey

Coach Favors Rule Changes About Fouling

ST. LOUIS — Little Eddie Hickey, long a student of the game, thinks it's high time he and his fellow coaches do something about excessive fouling in college basketball.

The veteran St. Louis University coach lays the problem right in the laps of the coaches, because, says Hickey, it's the coaches who have caused the problem.

"There's no doubt," charged Hickey, who is president of the National Assn. of College Basketball coaches, "but that present day defense borders strongly on intentional fouls to prevent the other team from gaining an advantage with the possibility of a field goal.

"The defense gives up one point (scored on a free throw awarded for a foul) for the chance of scoring two themselves (by gaining control of the ball after the free throw attempt)."

The intentional foul, however, is just one of the criticisms Hickey—and other coaches, too—have against present-day basketball. In a quick rundown, Hickey also stands against the "one-one" free throw rule, the "three-minute" rule and the penalty forcing a player from the game when he commits his fifth personal foul.

Under a plan drafted by Hickey for submission to the coaches at their Kansas City convention next month all four "problems" are eliminated.

Hickey's revised penalty system would allow a player to remain in a game no matter how many personal fouls he collected. But the player's fourth and succeeding fouls would be termed "excessive personals" and would carry a stiff penalty.

An "excessive" foul in Hickey's book would permit the offended player as many as three free throws. At least he would receive two.

hit .305 and led in doubles and was second in RBIs. In 1948, Storey batted .305 again at third base.

Portland traded Storey to San Diego after the start of the 1949 season, where he batted .301, hit 17 home runs and batted in 96 runs. It was there Storey had one of his greater thrills, outlasting Luke Easter with three home runs in one game in the Los Angeles park.

Another thrill he recalls was as a pinchhitter with San Diego in 1949 when he turned on his former Portland teammates. In the 10th inning with the score tied 0-0, he hit the first pitch from Ad Liska for a home run with bases loaded!

In 1950, he didn't play regularly but appeared in 150 games and hit .367, earning 15 hits as a pinchhitter.

The old demon injury popped up again in 1951 when he broke a thumb at San Diego after getting a good start, finishing with 260. The thumb cost him six weeks of playing.

Rebelling at Being Sold
Starting at San Diego in 1952, he found himself sold to Little Rock of the Southern league, but rebelled and didn't report. Instead Storey went to Drain, Ore., to play semipro ball for Roy Heiser, who was in somewhat the same boat by not doing the bidding of Portland. The Padres suspended Storey until last winter when Vancouver bought Storey to manage the Capitanos, whom he piloted to fourth and third places in each half. Vancouver, at the same time, was last in team batting and second in fielding. Storey hit .343 at third base.

Releasing of Storey came about through change of ownership. Dewey Soriano of Seattle taking over and bringing in Bill Brenner of Lewiston as player-manager.

Storey married a Tacoma girl in 1939. He and Marian now have twin sons, Harvey, Jr., and Charles, 7, and a daughter, Rebecca, 6.

Perhaps when Storey is introduced Wednesday night he will remind Luby of the time Storey robbed Luby of glory with a well-placed glove. It was opening day of 1947 with San Francisco at Portland and the Angels had bases loaded, one out and Luby at bat. Luby banged a sharp line drive to the left of Storey at third base and he stabbed at it and caught it in spectacular fashion to save the day.

On the same team they should be quite a combination, except that Luby has hung up his glove after 22 years of playing.

Luby Tells SBC of Club Hopes for 1954 Season

General Manager Hugh Luby told the Salem Breakfast club this morning that the Salem Senators club hopes to "surround Harvey Storey with a good team including two good, strong left-handed hitters."

Storey, one of the Western International league's leading power hitters, hit .343 for Vancouver and will be player-manager at third base for the Senators the next season.

Luby appeared on the Senator hotel program with Gene Tanselli, Senator shortstop who was sold to Portland on a 30-day look-see contract.

It was Storey's bat which "kept Vancouver up," Luby pointed out, for Vancouver was last in team batting and finished fourth in the first half and third in the second half.

The Salem roster includes eight or nine, Luby explained, and five of seven pitchers indicate they will be back. The roster includes some rookies yet untried, he said further.

"We will have to rely on Pacific Coast clubs to option us players," he said, especially Sacramento and San Diego. When March rolls around Luby said he would be at their spring camps looking for material.

Tanselli said "I hope I can do Salem and Luby justice when I do get to Glendale. I should have a good chance to stay." The shortstop indicated he heard he would be tried at third base and said he hopes it's true.

"People here have treated me fine and if I don't make the grade in the Coast league I'll be back here at Salem."

Luby added that Tanselli has improved greatly in the past two years and can pull the ball to right field to help the Beavers.

Russia, in Skiing Lead in Finns

FALUN, Sweden. — Russia and Finland split top honors in the opening events of the world skiing championships Sunday and left no doubt they're the ones to beat in other Nordic competition this week.

Finland's jumping ace, Matti Pietikainen, carried off the world title in the jumping competition. And Russia's strong muscled Vladimir Kusin won the 30-kilometer cross country race.

The best American skiers could do was a tie for 13th place in the jumping by Keith Wegeman of Camp Hale, Colo., and Art Devlin of Lake Placid, N.Y. They had a total of 212 points each, far behind the master Finn's winning total of 230½.

The strong Finnish squad was close to scoring a grand slam in the cross country event when Viikko Hakulinen, 1952 Olympic Gold Medal winner in the 50 kilometer race, came in second, 26 seconds behind Kusin.

Patterson Gets Favorite's Role

NEW YORK (AP)—Undeclared Floyd Patterson is a 4-1 favorite to rack up his 10th straight victory tonight when he faces Yvon Durelle, former Canadian light heavyweight champion, at Brooklyn's Eastern Parkway Arena.

This is the first outing for the Olympic champion since he was chosen as Boxing's Rookie of the Year by the Boxing Writers Assn. last month. The award temporarily jinxed two previous winners, Rocky Castellani and Vince Martinez.
