Baldock Talks At Road Meet

SEATTLE (AP)—Highway officials of Oregon and Washington said Wednesday the two states are setting records in road building but need more money.

William A. Bugge, Washington State highway director, and R. H. Baldock, Oregon state highway engineer, spoke at the Northwest Conference on Road Building.

Bugge said 45 million dollars worth of construction is underway in Washington and a new peak in awards will be reached this year. He said a predicted state population of three million by 1960 emphasized the need for more roads.

Baldock reviewed the growing need for highways, and rapped the "rush of toll roads spreading over the United States."

"People are tired of waiting for free roads," he said, "but certainly are paying a premium for toll roads."

He said toll financing eventually would cost the road user one-fourth to one-third more than bond-tax financing.

Noted Pianist Here Feb. 23

Henry L. Scott, termed the "hilarious virtuoso of the piano" and "America's first concert humorist," has been secured by the Salem Y's Men's club to present a program in the Leslie junior high school auditorium at 8 p. m. Tuesday, February 23.

Life tags Scott with the title "The Will Rogers of the Piano" and wherever he has appeared he has provided entertainment that not only pleases the more sophisticated music lovers but those who have never heard of Chopin and Liszt.

Scott's program calls for such numbers as "History of the Lost Chord," "Myopic Muddle," "Rhythm at Any Cost," "Chopin in the Citrus Belt" and the "Second Hungarian Rhapsody."

Scott's advance notices claim "he plays like a whirlwind, but what is even more remarkable is the spectacle of sedate dowagers in concert halls as sacrosanct as Carnegie and Town Hall and others in Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago, howling. He literally reduces the patrons to hysteria with a new form of art."

Hell's Canyon Not on Agenda

LA GRANDE (AP)—A delegation from Baker Tuesday was not permitted to discuss the controversial Hells Canyon Dam at a State Water Resources Committee hearing here.

Lyle Watts of Portland, committee chairman, told the delegation: "It is beyond the scope of this committee to discuss Hells Canyon and we don't want to spend the entire afternoon on that question."

The meeting here was the second of a series to be held throughout the state this month and next. The committee, established by the last Legislature, hopes at the conclusion of the hearings to develop a comprehensive water development program for the state.

Fifteen prepared statements from organizations and individuals interested in water management were read at Tuesday's hearing at the La Grande armory. About 125 persons from Union, Wallowa and Baker counties attended.

Harry Wells of La Grande presided.

Holmes said the $8,818,000 program proposed in the budget for the Columbia Basin in the year beginning July 1 "is not enough money to keep up an efficiently planned program of the construction of lateral canals."

He said it would take a minimum of four million more "to keep this program properly under way... to maintain an efficient and well-planned rate of irrigation development."

Labor Leader Sees 'Year of Destiny'

VANCOUVER, B. C. (AP)—Organized labor in both the United States and Canada is entering a "year of destiny," Al Hartung, international president of the International Woodworkers of America (CIO-CCL), said here Tuesday.

Speaking before the 17th annual convention of the B. C. district of the IWA, Hartung, of Portland, said the union must adopt a firm course of political action.

Results of the November Senate and congressional elections in the U. S. would have far-reaching effects in Canada as well as the U. S., he said.

If the "reactionary" forces are not defeated in November, "you haven't seen anything yet of what they'll do to crucify labor."
