The gear grease contract went to Union Oil with a bid of 17.55 cents per pound. The kerosene contract was not awarded. Two concerns presented identical figures.

On hand, too, was one of the Eisenhowers' hosts, old friend Paul G. Hoffman, board chairman of the Studebaker Corp., and former chief of the government's foreign aid program. Hoffman invited Eisenhower to Palm Springs four years ago, but the Eisenhowers actually are staying here at the Smoke Tree Ranch home of Paul H. Helms, a bakery executive. The ranch, close by snow-capped, 10,800-foot Mt. San Jacinto, is a development made up of 61 privately owned homes. Hoffman's place is located about a block from Helms' home. Hoffman told newsmen Secret Service agents picked the Helms residence over his for the President because of security advantages. "It has a closed patio, for example," Hoffman said, "and it has complete privacy." He described it as a "very simple place" with four bedrooms. The Helms family is providing a cook and a butler for the Eisenhowers. The President was accompanied from Washington by a small White House staff and he intends to mix some business with relaxation.

"But there is the Khyber pass," suggested Congressman Celler, "and also you have the example of the Chinese invasion of Tibet." "Yes," replied Premier Nehru, pulling a document from his desk, "but your State Department ruled that Tibet was Chinese. So how can you expect us to argue with them about taking it over. Of course, your State Department made this ruling when Ching Kai-Shek was in power, and here is a copy of the diplomatic note. But having ruled that it was Chinese once, you have to take the consequences, and so does India." Congressman Celler left India with the impression that the proposed U. S. military alliance with Pakistan was one to cause us a lot more headaches than is realized by Vice President Nixon, the man who strongly recommended it to Eisenhower.

soldiers about seeing Amelia Earhart. But they said: "Boy, hasn't the heat really got him?" and "I would not believe me."
"Toward evening, while I was walking down the steps into the lower deck where the bunk beds are, I slipped from the top step and slid all the way down to the bottom of the stairway on my neck. I have since been in about three hospitals. I would always mention to nurses and doctors that I saw Amelia Earhart, but they all doubted me."
"I have seen pictures of Amelia Earhart and I am sure it was her. I wish there was some way I could go back there and prove that I saw her. She may still be living there."
"What prompted me to write this letter was the fact that last week I had a dream that I was talking to her in the same location."
"Wishing you all the health and happiness in the world, and God's blessings."

The United States National Bank of Portland announced Thursday the purchase of this frontage on South Commercial Street, adjoining the present quarters, for expansion and drive-in facilities. The bank now owns a little over a quarter of the block.

Bank Expands

in conjunction with the new building planned by the C. L. Corporation.
An entrance into the bank is also to be provided off street on the south side of the present quarters so persons using the parking facilities will have an under-cover entrance into the bank from the south side.
E. C. Sammons of Portland, president of the United States National Bank, said the bank was fortunate to acquire the additional space because it is needed by the bank in the fast-growing community.
Now quartered in the two-story property covered by the deal is the General Finance Corporation and the Crown Drug Store. Formerly the International Business Machines had quarters in the property, but this space is now vacant. Upstairs space has at times been used for offices or apartments. The Capital Journal was located in the building before it moved to Chemeketa street.
The 61-year-old brick front, a well-preserved structure, is believed to have been built by Thomas Burrows, an Englishman, who came to Salem in 1864. Partially, at least, the building was occupied by his grocery, which he sold in 1902, according to records.
An interesting aspect of this construction in 1893 is, however, only to be discovered in the records of Union Title Insurance company. Years after the building was erected Paul Oberhein, owner of property to the southward and Thomas Burrows discovered that the south brick wall of the Burrows building was not on the property line and in 1903 agreed to avoid litigation and leave the wall where it then stood without recourse to law.
Other Early History
Other records available in relation to title insurance show that Chloe A. Willson, widow of W. H. Willson, popularly regarded as the founder of Salem, deeded the whole of Lot 7 in block 34 to Turner Crump in the middle 1850s.
Shortly thereafter Crump deeded a fraction of lot 7 to John Byrne, the celebrated "Patcheye" Byrne who ran the Crystal saloon there in the 1860s. It will be recalled that Patcheye and Plamonde who kept the more urbane "Belvedere" across the street, were mortal enemies. And, as the oft-repeated story has it, when "Plums" Belvedere went up in smoke in the early 1860s Plum was heard to say that if he could catch the so-and-so who burned his Belvedere he would put a patch on his other eye.

4 More Errors

fill the vacancy although there is no mention of his name in the book.
In the abstract of votes in the general election held on November 4, 1953, Rep. Harris Ellsworth is listed as a democrat, although in other use of the congressman's name he is shown as a republican, which of course he has been during his entire voting life.
One state agency is omitted entirely in the new booklet which incidentally is the finest, best looking blue book that has been issued at any time in the past. This agency is the State Labor Examiner created by the 1953 legislature through passage of the so-called anti-picketing law. The Rev. F. G. Scherer, who was appointed by Governor Patterson as State Labor Examiner on July 16, 1953, is listed in the Blue Book as chairman of the State Board of Conciliation, a position he resigned prior to assuming the examiner's post.
The fourth new error lists Lawrence T. O'Brien as Deputy Warden of the State Penitentiary. O'Brien has not been connected with the prison since last April.

At the insistence of U.S. Secretary of State Dulles the communique also contained this paragraph:
"It is understood that neither the invitation to, nor the holding of, the above-mentioned conference shall be deemed to imply diplomatic recognition in any case where it has not already been accorded."
In his concluding remarks to the conference, Dulles disclosed that "We have agreed to pursue the four-power search for agreement on reduction of armaments as recommended by the United Nations."
Dulles took off in the presidential plane Columbine at 8:09 p.m. (11:09 a.m. PST) for Washington.

Grocery Damaged By Mill City Fire

He said he never got official confirmation of the report, but he told the Marine court that it was a current story in officers' clubs that the Strategic Air Command and other Air Force units briefed their men to tell more than their names, rank and serial numbers. There was no testimony on how much more the men were reported advised to say.
Twinning Denies Orders
At a recent Pentagon news conference Gen. Nathan Twining, Air Force chief of staff, said the Air Force had given no orders to pilots to tell more than the bare facts of their personal identity if they fell into enemy hands.
Shortly after Galer's appearance on the stand, Schwable's copilot on the ill-fated flight that put him in enemy hands was made an "interested party" in the proceedings.
The officer, Maj. Roy H. Bley, also was captured and, like Schwable, signed a germ warfare confession.

He was called to the stand as a witness in the inquiry, which is aimed at determining whether more formal action should be taken in Schwable's case.
