Church Council Outlines Plan For Territory Allocation

A program of cooperative policies, worked out during the recent first annual convocation of the Oregon Council of Churches in Salem, includes plans for the allocation of new territories for development by member denominations. It also provides that church bodies will confer with the official board and obtain its advice, before founding or relocating a church.

All members of the committee are notified of these requests and unless protests are received, the committee will conduct a hearing and make a decision on the facts developed.

Groups which receive an allocation are expected to begin worship services, establish a Sunday school or buy property within a year. Under some circumstances, an allocation will be continued upon request for a second year, but the committee will not extend an allocation for more than two years except in special cases.

The committee may allocate a territory for one denomination for establishment of a new church, in which case the new congregation will be expected to serve all Protestants in its area on a community basis.

An allocation may be given where other churches already exist because of a need for additional church facilities, or two or more denominations may be designated to establish a federated church, or to merge existing facilities.

There is a sub-committee on research and survey, whose chairman is a member of the parent committee on research and planning. This sub-committee keeps tabs on Oregon's church-connected population, as well as the ever-changing pattern of population in suburbs and rapidly growing areas where a high proportion of the residents are not church members.
