Fire Destroys Eugene School; Pupils Escape

EUGENE (UP)—School officials here said today they doubted that the Francis Willard elementary school could be reopened for classes. The 38-year-old building was damaged extensively yesterday afternoon by a three-alarm fire.

Confesses

The "pumpkin papers" were the principal exhibits for the prosecution in Hiss' two trials on charges of perjury.

Inslerman said he began "some time in late 1937" to photograph documents for "Bob" and continued until "the late spring or summer of 1938."

It was during that period that Chambers contended he had been given State Department documents by Alger Hiss.

Inslerman said he was a native of New York City. During the time he was photographing documents, he testified, he worked for the Westinghouse Corp. and for a refrigeration firm in Baltimore. Trained in Moscow.

Inslerman said he had been trained in Moscow to photograph documents and to receive the international radio code.

On his return to this country in 1935, Inslerman said, he was contacted by a Soviet agent named "Ben" whom he could not identify further.

Inslerman testified that "Bob," or Chambers, a confessed courier for the Soviet underground during the 1930s, was the principal witness at the trial of Hiss, former State Department officer, convicted on two counts of perjury. Hiss is serving two simultaneous five-year terms in the federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa.

Inslerman testified that "Bob," or Chambers, first brought documents to Inslerman's house in Baltimore "some time in late 1937."

Inslerman's testimony appeared to corroborate some of the testimony given by Chambers at Hiss' two trials. As Inslerman finished testifying, McCarthy said he would like to arrange a meeting of Chambers and Inslerman with a view to further cross checking of their accounts.

The FBI office in Albany declined to say whether Inslerman had talked to FBI agents and whether the FBI planned to step in. It was reported that he had talked to the FBI, however.

Mrs. Chambers, who said her husband has had two heart attacks in the past two weeks, declined to disturb him for his reaction to Inslerman's testimony.

The Chambers live on a farm near Westminster, Md., about 40 miles northeast of Baltimore. Mrs. Chambers said her husband is bedridden.

The public hearing broke up in turmoil as two General Electric employees, identified by a witness Friday as Communists, were ejected from the federal court room at McCarthy's order.

Elfstrom to

In the 1953 session Elfstrom served on highways, alcoholic control and commerce and utilities committee, being vice-chairman of the last named committee. He is now one of four House members serving on the legislative highway interim committee and is secretary of this group.

Rep. Elfstrom served as mayor of Salem, was a president of the League of Oregon Cities, was chairman of the Oregon Liquor Control Commission and was chosen as Salem's first citizen in 1952. He also served as president of the Cascade Area, Boy Scouts.

Oregon Democrats are slowly getting into the primary race, Joseph K. Carson, former mayor of Portland, having announced his candidacy for Governor early this week.

Reports from Portland indicate that Carson will have opposition with Lew Wallace, former State Senator and a perennial candidate for state office, as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor. William L. Jossin, who served as private secretary to the late Gov. Charles Martin, is flirting with the idea of entering the gubernatorial race on the Democratic ticket.

The final date for filing of candidates seeking public office is March 12, just three weeks distant. Oral arguments in the reapportionment case will be heard by the State Supreme Court on February 24 and it is expected that a decision on the validity of the reapportionment measure approved by the voters will come shortly after.

Inasmuch as this measure changes numerous senatorial and representative districts in the state, many prospective candidates must await the court action before making final decision on filing for the Legislature.

Langer's Action

Sen. Eastland (D-Miss), first to leave the subcommittee's closed session, said the five-member group recommended confirmation of Warren to the full judiciary committee, without objection.

But Langer later told reporters he had voted "merely to refer this to the full committee for action."

Sen. Watkins (R-Utah) also denounced them as "a lot of tom-tom."

Langer said that when the full committee meets Wednesday, he would favor an open or public session but this decision would be left to the members.

Welker said the motion to recommend Warren's nomination favorably to the full committee was made by Watkins and seconded by Sens. Hendrickson (R-N.J.) and Jennings (D-Mo.).

Both Deputy Atty. Gen. William P. Rogers and Asst. Atty. Gen. Warren Olney, in charge of the Justice Department's criminal division, made statements to the subcommittee. Langer said these would be made public later.

Welker said his understanding was that the entire record of Saturday's session was to be made public.

Charges Filed by Wilson
Later the official reporter read part of the committee transcript to newsmen, and it showed that the first charges against Warren came from Roderick J. Wilson — a man who, Rogers said, "now is a fugitive from justice."

ANNOUNCES

Robert I. Elfstrom, who said today he would be a candidate for re-election to the Oregon House of Representatives.

Reports from Portland indicate that Carson will have opposition with Lew Wallace, former State Senator and a perennial candidate for state office, as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor. William L. Jossin, who served as private secretary to the late Gov. Charles Martin, is flirting with the idea of entering the gubernatorial race on the Democratic ticket.

Secret Threat

In that case, Churchill was said to have declared, West and South Europe, to the channel and to the Mediterranean, would be open to the Red armies of Russia and its satellites.

The information, from persons with access to the records of the Bermuda conference, was that Bidault and his aides were annoyed at first by the bluntness of some of Churchill's remarks. Bidault at the time was pinch-hitting for Laniel, who was ill. One of the things the French reportedly resented was what they considered a disparaging reference by Churchill to the condition and efficiency of the French Army.

Bidault also expressed some apparent defiance when Churchill spoke of possible new arrangements to bring Germany into NATO. In a roundabout way, the informants said, he reminded Churchill that France still possessed a veto right in NATO councils.

The implication was that France — a member of the American-British-French standing group of NATO — would block Germany's direct entry into the alliance.

But French cooperation was evidenced by a pledge to continue working for the earliest possible ratification of EDC. This project for a six-nation, one-uniform army of Europeans would include 12 West German divisions.

Later the official reporter read part of the committee transcript to newsmen, and it showed that the first charges against Warren came from Roderick J. Wilson — a man who, Rogers said, "now is a fugitive from justice."

Rogers called it "very regrettable" that "the chief justice can be maligned by a man who is a fugitive from justice for perjury."

The deputy attorney general added, "I'm afraid the county will be shocked when they hear about it."

Wilson's charges were set out in a letter to Burr McCloskey of Detroit and McCloskey in turn presented them to the subcommittee.

Olney told the subcommittee that McCloskey has a long record of association with Trotskyite organizations, including some that have been labeled subversive by the attorney general, and now is organizational director of the "American Rally."

Sack Released

Sack declined to answer specifically a number of questions about his background. He did say, however, that his first wife died in a fire and that his second wife was killed in a holdup.

From Chicago it was learned that a Julia Sack, 27, was fatally burned the night of June 1, 1923. Her husband, a George Sack, who was the beneficiary of a $5,000 life insurance policy, was held for questioning but later released.

Then on March 16, 1925, a Mrs. Edna Sack, 34, was mysteriously shot to death in a taxicab in suburban Cicero. Her husband, a George Sack, also was wounded. He said an unknown assailant had attacked them.

Police doubted the story and Sack was charged with murder and brought to trial. He was represented by the famous attorney Clarence Darrow. Sack was declared insane, only to be released in 1932.

The Sack who was questioned in Portland said he was a World War I veteran and that he had spent some time at a veterans' hospital at Roseburg, Ore. recently. The claims number of the man treated at Roseburg was the same as that of the man who was in the Illinois asylum.

The woman whose body was found in Portland Thursday, the former Goldie Goodrich, was born at Dayton, Ore. She married Sack in September, 1952, after teaching for many years at Great Falls, Mont.
