Wood Panels From Shavings

TACOMA—First plant in the Pacific Northwest to manufacture wood panels from sawmill shavings will be built in North Bend, Ore., by Weyerhaeuser Timber Co. it was announced Thursday.

A. O. Karlen, manager of Weyerhaeuser's Coos Bay branch, reported approval of plans to construct facilities for the production of particle board, a wood panel made up of planer-mill shavings and synthetic resins.

"This new plant," Karlen said, "will be built on our present branch millsite, adjacent to the planing mill. When completed in early 1955, we expect it to employ about 40 men on a three-shift basis.

"Addition of this unit will allow us to achieve a more complete utilization of the timber we harvest from the Millcreek tree farm. Our annual particle board production target—about 1 1/2 million square feet on a 3/4-inch basis—can be realized without cutting a single extra tree. The wood raw material will be that left over from our present operations."

In addition he operates a 75-acre farm near Salem on which he raises fruit and nuts.

Rep. Chadwick served two terms as mayor of Salem, was vice president of the League of Oregon Cities. During his legislative career he has served on important house committees, including ways and means, local government, taxation and rules.

He is one of two members of the house from Marion county to seek re-election. Rep. Robert L. Elstrom having announced last week. Mayor Al Loucks has also announced that he will seek one of the four Marion county seats in the house of representatives.

Strong Man of

No other changes were made in the government's cabinet.

The decision to accept Naguib's resignation was made at a meeting of Nasser and other officers following a cabinet meeting which the general had attended. Naguib was sent home before the council accepted his resignation.

Naguib's fall from power pointed to a more rigid policy toward Britain and less cooperation with the West, a policy that was expected to cause concern in the United States.

The council's communique said Naguib had demanded dictatorial powers and given them an ultimatum to accept them or lose his leadership.

Naguib handed in his resignation three days ago, "thus facing the council with a fait accompli (accomplished deed) knowing that any rift in the present circumstances would be unsafe."

Crop Control Survey Starts

WASHINGTON—The Agriculture Department next week will survey farmers' production plans for the summer to try to learn to what extent they expect to comply with government crop control programs.

Because of existing record surpluses, Secretary of Agriculture Benson has set up programs calling for an overall reduction of about 30 million acres in plantings of wheat, cotton and corn.

The proposed cutbacks include about 18 million acres for wheat, 4 million for cotton and 10 million for corn. They would put this year's plantings at about 62 1/2 million acres for wheat, 21,500,000 for cotton and 71 million for corn.

In the case of wheat and cotton, there are strong economic compulsions upon farmers to comply with Benson's program. Farmers overplanting their allotments for harvest will be denied government price support assistance and be subject to stiff penalty taxes on excess cotton or wheat sold.

In the case of corn, over-planters would lose price support aid, but would not be subject to marketing penalties.

Stevens Angry

In the early afternoon, it appeared that Stevens still was considering what course to take.

During the morning, Gen. Matthew Ridgway, Army chief of staff, was in and out of Stevens' office. So were John Adams, Army legal adviser, and Hugh Milton, assistant secretary of the Army.

Stevens was reported to be angry and indignant over some phases of his go-round with McCarthy. Further, he was said to be troubled over the possible effect on Army morale.

The secretary went to his office early and launched into a series of conferences with top advisers. Sources close to the secretary said it was Stevens' understanding that agreement was reached in his conference Wednesday with Republican members of McCarthy's subcommittee that any Army mitre in the future would be accorded respect.

He was said to be angry that the memorandum of agreement, read by Sen. Mundt (R-SD) after the session, omitted any reference to this and to feel it left him in an untenable position.

Moscow Made Crisis in France Over Defense

PARIS—A Made-in-Moscow crisis is developing here over Western European defense plans, the key to U.S. strategy for blocking Soviet power in Europe.

The crisis springs from the Berlin conference decision to hold the Geneva conference of the Big Four Red China and other nations to discuss Korea and Indochina.

By engineering this decision at the last minute at Berlin, Soviet Foreign Minister V.M. Molotov has managed to pit urgent French interest in ending the Indochina war against the urgent interest of the United States in getting France to approve a European army that includes Germany.

Premier Joseph Laniel's coalition cabinet has split over the timing of steps to bring this approval from a reluctant National Assembly. Some members favor going ahead with Assembly action before the Geneva conference in April, or perhaps at the same time. Others would delay action until the conference ends.

American policy holds that the European army proposal offers the only hope of an adequate Western European defense. If the army plan fails here in Paris, the United States will take a new look at its European policies. And how Laniel and French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault now handle EDC should have a lot to do with whether it fails or wins.

Supporters of action before Geneva hold that if the decision is delayed until the Geneva meeting is concluded, Russia may attempt to bargain Indochina peace against EDC in an effort to kill off the EDC.

Furthermore, American officials believe that Berlin disclosures of Russia's resolve to maintain a strong military position in Germany and Austria have influenced much French opinion in favor of EDC. They think this effect will be lost if action is not taken quickly.

Laniel and Bidault favor going ahead with Assembly action with all possible speed, in talks with officials this week, Bidault has

Confirmation

Wilson said he was prepared to testify for "several days" but the committee sent him away after about two and one-half hours. Wilson juggled away the 37 pounds of documents he had tried to put in the record. The committee approval of Warren's nomination followed shortly.

But Wilson got one break. Metropolitan police had arrested him in the committee room earlier on a telegraphed complaint from San Francisco police that he was a fugitive from a 1952 warrant charging subornation of perjury. Municipal Judge Andrew M. Howard, Jr. ordered Wilson released. The judge said the telegram was not sufficient evidence that Wilson was a fugitive.

Wilson said he would go home to California this week-end and "they will find I'm the most un-fugitive fugitive they've ever had."
