

Ike May Have Something To Say About McCarthy

By LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON (UP)—If President Eisenhower follows his usual schedule, he has until day after tomorrow to decide whether the Zwicker incident requires him to break openly with Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wis).

Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker was the Army officer whom McCarthy so roughly handled in a one man committee hearing that Army Secretary Robert Stevens demanded a showdown with the senator. What Stevens got was an understanding with McCarthy which looked very much like an army surrender.

May Speak Wednesday
What the President intends to do about the humiliation of his Army secretary and of one of his general officers should develop Wednesday at his usual weekly news conference. There was none last week. White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty indicated that the President would have something to say about McCarthy the next time he met the press. The administration has been upset and angry. White House intimates were saying through last week that the President probably would speak out on the McCarthy-Stevens-Zwicker row. Scores of reporters are anxious for a chance next Wednesday to ask the appropriate questions.

Many Sided Issue
This is a tough campaign year. Some political realists hold that it is no year to compel Republicans, especially Republican candidates, to choose between Mr. Eisenhower and McCarthy. Most Republicans here apparently feel that the Communism-in-government issue ballyhooed by McCarthy is among the best to use against the Democrats next November.

Mr. Eisenhower became personally involved in the dispute last week when he authorized an announcement that he backed "100 per cent" the Stevens version of the understanding with McCarthy. The senator promptly repudiated that. The President is further involved as the leader of a party and as the chief of an administration which McCarthy consistently attacks on varying fronts.

Moreover, Mr. Eisenhower is an old soldier to whom others in the armed services naturally look for protection against what they regard as outrageous treatment.
