Train Bangs Portland Car

A car that stopped on the 12th street railroad tracks Saturday afternoon suffered considerable damage when struck by a slow-moving freight train, city police reported. The wife of the driver suffered minor injuries.

Driver of the car, Barkley Burrough Wilson, 65, Portland, told police he heard the train whistle but thought it was a block away. He had stopped for the flashing red light at State street as he headed north on 12th street when the accident occurred. He did not know there were any tracks on the street, he said.

His wife, Edith, 61, suffered a bruised shoulder. First aidmen treated the injury.

Witnessing Officer Richard Davis said he and other motorists honked horns in an effort to warn Wilson of the train. The train struck the car in the right rear, smashing the rear fender and door and doing other damage to the car.

All 9 on Lost

The first eyewitness accounts of the crash scene were given here by Robert Engle, Newcastle rancher, and Clyde Ice, who operates a flying service.

They said the plane appeared to have struck the ground at a 45-degree angle at terrific speed "and the plane and the people aboard were smashed to bits."

Engle said it looked as though the craft had practically disintegrated. Pieces of metal were scattered over a wide area and even hanging from branches in pine and cedar trees.

Dug Holes in Ground
"The only part of the plane that was recognizable was one wheel," Engle told a reporter. "The two engines dug holes in the ground about five feet long and two feet deep."

He said the plane hit the earth in a comparatively flat stretch, just south of a range of sandy hills.

The wreckage was located from the air Sunday and a three-man party headed by sheriff Carl Thoenig, unable to find the wreckage in darkness, spent the night in the vicinity.

3 Held for Girl's Murder

PORTLAND (AP)—Police continued to hold two Chinese men and a Caucasian woman here Monday as they investigated the death of a 16-year-old high school girl, who disappeared Jan. 6.

The teen-age girl, Diane Hank, left her home that night to stay with her friends, Wayne Fong, 25, and his Caucasian wife, Scherri Fong, 22. Police are holding the Fongs, along with a house guest, Kwong Ting Yee, 28.

The Fongs are being held on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor and their house guest on a charge of being out after hours.

The girl's body was found, tied in blankets, beside the Evergreen Highway near Washougal last Friday.

Police are waiting results of an autopsy.

3 Held for Girl's Murder

Art Carlstrom, about 30, a St. Helens grocery store operator, was injured fatally early Sunday when his car crashed off a highway four miles west of St. Helens.

A pickup truck ran off the road near Molalla Saturday, killing the driver, Oliver Hecker, 29.

William Gordon Bruce, about 36, Portland, died Saturday when his car collided with an empty car-carrying truck near Klamath Falls.

Robert Murphy, a 15-year-old Portland high school student who couldn't swim, drowned Sunday when he jumped into the Willamette in an effort to rescue an 8-year-old fishing companion who had fallen in. Other fishermen rescued the 8-year-old.

Andy Lemon, a commercial fisherman from Eureka, Calif., was killed in a boating accident off the Umpqua River bar Sunday. His boat went out of control when rock, used for ballast, broke loose and jammed the rudder. Three huge waves battered the boat, washing Lemon overboard.

Other crewmen brought the boat into the Reedsport Harbor under its own power.

Ralph LaCharne, 9, was wounded fatally Sunday when a gun he was handling discharged accidentally at his home in Grand Ronde. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph LaCharne, said they had believed the revolver, which they kept in a holster hanging on a wall in the living room of their home, was unloaded.

in the tuberculosis ward at the hospital. This agreement has six months to run.

Ample Labor Supply
William Ryan, supervisor of institutions, said that vacancies on the staff are now being filled from the civil service list and there is ample supply of labor to fill all hospital needs.

Governor Paul L. Patterson requested Mills to notify the civil service commission to have a representative present at the meeting and also to notify the Oregon States Employees association of the hearing. The latter organization requested opportunity of being heard at the hearing. Incidentally, this latter organization upheld the employment of the conscientious objectors as hospital aides, insisting that the employment of this group had not kept any unemployed persons out of a job.

Pistol Wielders

As police seized the group and rushed them to police headquarters in downtown Washington, one of the three tossed a Puerto Rican flag into the air.

There were some differences of opinion as to whether others, in addition to the two men and the woman, fired shots.

"I am sure I saw four persons shooting," Rep. Louis E. Graham (R-Pa.) told reporters. "The woman was shooting into the ceiling but I am sure that three men were shooting down into the chamber." Graham said Rep. Benjamin James (R-Pa.) who was seated next to him exclaimed when the shooting began:

"My God, this is real."

The woman who was seized identified herself to reporters as Lolita Lebron. "I want freedom for my country," she shouted.

The girl said she was a Puerto Rican. "My country must be freed," she yelled.

The House was immediately recessed. The Senate, in session across the capitol, directed that all spectators leave its galleries.

Rep. Alvin M. Bentley (R-Mich) was lying on the floor after the shooting ended.

Rep. Clifford Davis (D-Tenn) was holding his ankle and apparently had been shot.

The pistol wielders rose from a corner near the press gallery and started firing as they shouted: "My country is not free. Free Puerto Rico."

Members on the floor ducked for the lobby or crouched down in their seats.

Two of the three were men. The other was a woman. They fired what appeared to be Luger pistols and tried to reload.

This is the second violent demonstration here for Puerto Rican independence in recent years.

On Nov. 1, 1950, two Puerto Rican revolutionists attempted to shoot their way into Blair House, temporary residence at that time of President Truman.

Blast Kills 5

The victims included the proprietor of the luncheonette, Isadore Pearlman, 50, and three young customers. The bodies of Bruce Schwartz, 9, and Salvatore Baladino, 6, were found under the soda fountain. The body of 15-year-old Marie Marone was uncovered nearby.

The fifth victim was Mrs. Fanny Rudolph, 45, who lived in an apartment above the jewelry store. Her husband Samuel, 45, suffered cuts and bruises.

The impact of the explosion bent an electric sign across the street into a U-shape. Windows for blocks were shattered.

Several neighbors told police they noticed the odor of gas before the blast.

Witness Tells

As soon as the shooting stopped and I got back on my feet, I discovered my friend Kenneth Roberts, of Alabama, lying wounded on the floor, directly behind me. He had fallen down between two rows of seats.

Roberts was pale and all but unconscious, and blood was soaking his trousers from a wound in the side.

Two or three of us got a necktie around his leg for a tourniquet.

About the same time, word began to get around of others who had been wounded, and I understood that at least five were hit.

The big chamber buzzed with outraged comment, as members of the House attempted to help their stricken colleagues.

It seems very obvious that security measures surrounding the Congress are inadequate, and I would venture this: In the future there will be a lot better screening of people seeking admission to the galleries.

As I make this report, I do not yet know whether any of the members were hurt fatally. I sincerely hope they will all recover.
