2 Ships to Join Storage Fleet

SEATTLE (AP)—Two ships from the mothballed reserve transport fleet at Olympia arrived here Monday for conversion into floating storage bins for surplus wheat. The two Liberty ships, the George D. Prentiss and the John H. Quick, will be cleaned and fumigated and then filled with surplus wheat before they are taken back to Olympia to be anchored again. The Prentiss is under the general agency of the Alaska Steamship Co., which will operate 16 of the floating storage bins. The Quick will be operated by Olympic Steamship Co. and other steamship companies will handle the remainder of the storage bin fleet. Joseph Hare, Maritime Administration representative in this area, pointed out that the ships will not be reactivated but will remain "dead," towed around by tugs until they are reanchored, full of wheat, at Olympia. Each of the vessels the government plans to use for grain storage is capable of holding 6,000 tons apiece. In all, the government plans to store 800,000 tons of grain funneled to Tacoma and Seattle from storehouses in Washington, Idaho and Eastern Oregon.

Motor Coach School Coming

A motor coach, streamlined, and showing General Electric company's latest traffic light control equipment will be in Salem Wednesday and will be inspected by Salem officials. A tour of all states and Canada is being made by the specially built mobile display. It will make over 300 stops, and at each a traffic school will be held with municipal, county and state officials as the "pupils." In these school sessions, typical traffic intersection problems can be created by on-the-spot demonstration equipment. The mobile exhibit left New York City January 26, 1953. By the time its itinerary is concluded it will have been viewed by approximately 2800 municipal traffic officials. The exhibits cover the company's entire line of engineered traffic control systems. Each particular type operates the same as it would in an actual installation. G-E traffic engineers will demonstrate and explain how each type of controller operates under various traffic conditions.

Ray I. Rilance Faces Tax Count

PORTLAND (AP)—Ray I. Rilance, Clackamas County coroner, and two of his partners in an Oregon City funeral home, were arrested Monday on charges of violating federal income tax laws. Rilance, 52, and the two partners, George M. Hankins, 67, Oswego, and R. Morris Holman, 52, West Linn, posted $1,000 bail and were released. All three said their tax payments were in order. But agents for the Internal Revenue Bureau said the three had failed to report about $24,000 in income in the years 1947 to 1950. They said Holman and Rilance owed $1,893 each in taxes and that Hankins owed $2,283.

Girl Scouts to Sell Cookies

Girl Scouts throughout the Santiam area council will be knocking on doors and setting up downtown booths March 12-27 for their annual cookie sale. The sale is being started this year on the founding date of the 42nd year of Girl Scouting in the United States. Girl Scout Week is being recognized this year March 7-13 with the theme, "Know Your Neighbors—Know Your Nation." The Girl Scout program necessitated drastic cutbacks this year as a result of failings in the 1953 Community Chest fund drive. Without the funds, certain vital portions of the program will, by necessity, have to be eliminated. The 8-ounce box of cookies purchased in this community may well mean the difference between a program and no program at all. In the four counties of Marion, Polk, Linn and Benton (comprising the Santiam area council) alone there are over 1,800 girls, and more than 600 trained adults assisting. Cookie distributors in Salem are Mrs. James Waite, 2020 Warner street, and Mrs. W. M. Huxtable, 340 East Lefelle street.

Ancient Fraud Still Used, Post Office Inspector Says

The 364 year old Spanish prison racket is still sending hundreds of Americans to Mexico City annually, each with $10,000 which he does not bring back, Paul D. Bentley, Seattle postal inspector, told a Chamber of Commerce audience Monday at the Hotel Marion. This hoary old fraud is still bilking American suckers and shows no signs of letting up, Bentley said, adding that some of the victims suffer physical violence as well as loss of their money. The letters they get are virtually identical year after year and the something for nothing lure still works. Bentley told of numerous other frauds worked through the mails, many of whose perpetrators are now behind bars, through postal inspection activity. Bentley said the postal department was the largest non-military branch of the federal government with over 500,000 employees. It has 41,000 post offices, 32,000 rural routes, serving approximately one and a half million miles every day, while over 50 billion pieces of mail were transported in 1953 by the department and there were over 900 million transactions. He said the postal department had one of the largest saving systems in the country with approximately two and a half billion dollars. Showing the growth of the department he compared figures of a few years ago with the present day, stating that in 1940 there were approximately 27.7 billion pieces of mail handled.
