COMPULSORY FUN
 Taking time out from their sentry duties at Truonggia, Indochina, these Viet Minh soldiers, who guard the cease-fire negotiations being held here, partake in a series of song and dance demonstrations. Such routines are a compulsory part of the training for the Communist forces. At the peace talks in Geneva, a high Western spokesman predicted an Indochina truce by July 20. (U.P. Telephoto)

Morse Signs Minority Report on Cougar Dam

WASHINGTON (AP)—A minority report from the Senate Public Works Committee Tuesday opposing "partnership" construction of Cougar Dam on the South McKenzie River in Oregon, was signed by Sens. Morse of Oregon, Chavez (D-NM), and Gore (D-Tenn).

The committee majority recently approved the bill which would permit joint construction of the project by Army Engineers and the Eugene (Ore.) Water and Electric Board.

The three senators said they opposed the legislation because it "is a potential precedent for similar and more devastating plans which could destroy orderly and full development of the Columbia River Basin." The committee, they added, "did not consider the disruptive impact of the so-called partnership proposal... upon the carefully developed plans for comprehensive, regional water resource development in the Pacific Northwest."

They contended the committee should have held hearings on a bill by Morse and 15 other senators for construction of the Cougar project by the federal government. They also objected to the committee's refusal to hold hearings in the field on Cougar and on similar "partnership" proposals for Priest Rapids, Green Peter and John Adams.

The Cougar bill, introduced by Sen. Cordon and Rep. Ellsworth, Oregon Republicans, was cited by President Eisenhower as typifying the principals of the partnership policy.

Dr. Bunche Says U.N. Scored Many Successes

By LEN CALVERT

The beginning of a new, international age is a "blunt and clear challenge" for the nations of the world to learn to live together or perish together, D. Ralph Bunche, director of the United Nations Trusteeship division, warned Tuesday night in Eugene.

Speaking to a crowd of almost 1,300 persons, the 1950 Nobel Peace Prize winner dealt with international understanding in his talk at the University of Oregon. Dr. Bunche covered two topics, the U.N. and human relations; both of which he called "fundamental to international understanding."

"Broad tolerance and great patience" are essential in appraising others today, Dr. Bunche said. He emphasized the American public must understand that when other nations do not accept our views, it does not imply unfriendliness.

To reach these goals, national and group prejudice must be wiped out, Dr. Bunche pointed out. "The most firm source of hope for better understanding is that attitudes of the individual can and do change quite easily," he said, expressing the thought that the future "depends on the attitudes and work of each person."

This is particularly important in the United States, with its position of world leadership, he said. It is not enough to just "be against Communism," Dr. Bunche emphasized, but there must be "bold, persistent policies aimed to lead people to freedom."

In tracing the role of the United Nations in the world today, Dr. Bunche said the "U.N. must concentrate on maintaining an uneasy peace" while it seeks to improve the political climate.

While admitting that some disillusionment in the organization is "justified," Dr. Bunche pointed out that it has also had great successes, which are often overlooked by U.N. critics.

Not a small part of these successes has been the settlement of disputes in such countries as Iran, Palestine, Greece, Indonesia and Korea—any one of which could have erupted into a third world war, Dr. Bunche pointed out.

The U.N. is trying "to establish an international community based on law and morality," Dr. Bunche continued. "This is the only basis on which nations can live together without destroying each other," he stated.

The U.N. has also done important work in non-political areas, work which is often overlooked by the general public, Dr. Bunche said. One of the most important U.N. projects is that of providing "reciprocal exchange" of technical knowledge. This has done much to help improve the way of life of many peoples, he stated.

A plea for confidence, calmness and courage without fear was also sounded by Dr. Bunche in what he characterized as "worrisome, tense and dangerous times." Hysteria and emotional responses must be avoided, he warned.

The roads built by ancient Rome still form the skeleton for the highways of Europe.
