Edward G. Robinson And Writer Re-united

By HUBBARD KEAVY (For BOB Thomas)

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Here we are again, Edward G. Robinson and I, where we started 25 years ago. He is playing a gangster and I am writing about glamor, gangsters and girls.

"This is some coincidence, eh?" said Edward G. "We've been here about the same number of years and here you are, temporarily back on your old beat while I am temporarily back to my old racket—I mean, line."

I well remember the filming of "Little Caesar," in 1931 (it was released in '30) because it was one of the most exciting sets to visit. Edward G. played the role of the hill and was a pleasure to watch; and a set where there's gunfire always is interesting. That gangster film set the pace, made Edward G. a star and, for its producers, millions. But, being released now, in company with 1931's "Public Enemy," it will make even more millions than it did originally.

Robinson tried to analyze the success of "Little Caesar." "That guy wanted to get ahead and he did it in his way," he said. "We all want to get ahead. Even though we despise his methods, we secretly applaud his desires. There's a little of Little Caesar in all of us—the urge to be big shots."

This reunion of small significance has to be interrupted frequently by a director's demands. Robinson gets paid $60,000 per picture, I hear for acting so he must go into his lair and talk out of the side of his mouth on order. In this one, called "Black Tuesday," he is a gangster about to die in the chair. He escapes and continues his killings. It is brutal stuff.

School District to Open Bids Aug. 10

The Salem school district is advertising for bids in the amount of $780,000 to be opened at the administration building the night of August 10. The bonds are the last of an issue of $4,260,000 authorized by voters of the district June 16, 1952.

The money from the sale of the bonds was used in the construction of the new South Salem high school which is now nearing completion. However several hundred thousand dollars will remain which will be used elsewhere.

The $780,000 worth of bonds will be retired over a period of 20 years, the final payment being due Sept. 1, 1974. They will be in $1000 denominations.

Huge Dam in India Takes Much 'Know-how'

By EUGENE LEVIN

NANGAL TOWNSHIP, India (AP)—It takes know-how to build dams the size of mammoth Bhakra. It also takes patience and diplomacy. This is the lesson being learned by American and Indian engineers tackling the Bhakra Dam, which may rank as the world's highest when completed in eight years. It is part of the Nangal-Bhakra development project, on the Sutlej River in the Himalaya foothills 225 miles north of New Delhi. Originally it was designed to stand 680 feet high but additional excavations will add to the height.

India is paying the bill of $27 million dollars. American engineers are under direct contracts in no way connected with the U.S. economic aid to India. Their leader is Harvey Slocum of Alhambra, Calif., veteran construction boss at such big U.S. dams as Shasta and Grand Coulee. Between 30 and 45 Americans have been working here at various times.

In their advisory capacity, the Americans often have found themselves in the crucial role of supervisors. The Indians were nominally in charge, but the more experienced Americans were able to assert considerable influence.

Slocum and most of the Americans have managed to maintain good relations with their Indian fellow workers. Where their advice has not been accepted, they have taken the view that Bhakra, after all, is an Indian project.

Bhakra Dam has been an Indian dream for 40 years. Almost all the preparatory work is finished, and before the end of this year construction of the dam itself will start. Slocum describes it as possibly the most difficult dam ever undertaken, because of the remoteness of the site, the area's geological structure and the lack of sufficient trained personnel to supervise a 73,000-man work force.
