Why Scrap Free Competition

In the production of Natural Gas or any other product?

Natural gas comes to most consumers through interstate pipelines and local utility systems. They have franchises from state or local bodies, and have long been regulated. The producers who find the gas have not been regulated because more than 5,000 of them compete vigorously—and free competition is the best of all price controls.

Yet these producers have recently been singled out for Federal controls and price-fixing.

This is a step without peacetime precedent—to price-fix a consumer product at its source. It is a step that deeply disturbs many Americans, including the undersigned committee.

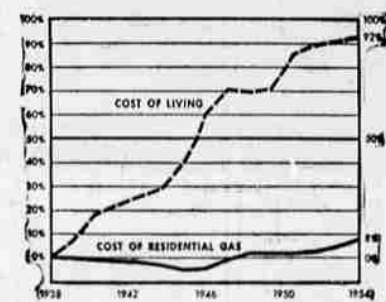

They believe the proposed controls are against the public interest and can benefit no one. They believe the issue goes far beyond gas. It goes to the roots of America's greatness. They believe the controls plan is unwise for many reasons.

It is Unnecessary because gas supplies have tripled in sixteen years. And costs to consumers have risen a nation-wide average of only one-eleventh as much as the cost of living.

It is Dangerous because it could easily be the first step toward Federal controls on coal or oil—or lumber or grain or your business.

It is Unfair because it singles out one competitive industry for such controls.

It is Short-sighted because it stifles the bold and risky exploring that's needed to assure adequate supplies.

As shown by the chart above, based on figures of the Bureau of Labor Statistics for a national average, the cost of natural gas to the residential consumer has gone up only one-eleventh as much as the cost of living in sixteen years.

Dehydrate Milk to Powder Like Fresh Milk

By VINCENT J. BURK
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP)—Government scientists said today they have discovered how to dehydrate milk into a powder which can later be reconverted into tasty "fresh whole milk" by adding water.

They said the process, if perfected, could "revolutionize" the milk industry.

But at present, there's at least one stumbling block to be overcome. The reconverted milk tastes good, but it doesn't look good.

In testimony made public today by a House Appropriations subcommittee, Dr. G. E. Hilbert, Agriculture Department scientist, explained:

Drink It Blindfolded

"We have been able to produce a powder which reconstitutes very readily with water. It has the same flavor as fresh whole milk."

"But the product as we produced it up to the present time, has a curdled appearance. It is not as smooth as milk. In a blindfold test, however, one would believe it to be fresh milk."

Another possible difficulty, Hilbert said, is that department scientists don't know yet how long their powdered product will keep in storage.

Other New Twists

Testimony by Hilbert and other Agriculture officials also revealed:

1. Department scientists hope to discover a process which will permit bakers to "freeze" hot bread as it comes from the oven to keep it fresh longer. This would permit bakeries to work on a 40-hour week, instead of operating seven days a week.

2. They have found a new and better method for producing dehydrated potato flakes. The flakes taste "practically the same as freshly mashed potatoes" when reconstituted with "hot milk or water," and save consumers the trouble of peeling and boiling potatoes.

3. One of the department's earlier developments, a two-way stretch fabric, is now being produced commercially. When used as a backing for plastic seat covers, the fabric keeps the plastic from cracking so easily.

Rosicrucians to Have Conclave

At a Rosicrucian conclave to be held at the West Salem City Building Tuesday night a ceremony that began in ancient Egypt over 40 centuries ago will be re-enacted.

New officers of the Rosicrucian organization here will be installed. They are: Mrs. Viola Kistler, master; Mrs. Eoith Pfeil, secretary; and A. R. Cameron, guardian. Visiting members from other cities are expected.

According to Harry Snell, present master of the Salem Rosicrucian, the people of ancient Egypt, from the time of Memphis to the Ptolemaic period, dated their new year on or about the time of the vernal equinox when the sun crosses the celestial equator and enters the zodiacal sign of Aries, about March 21. This was because spring symbolizes new life.

The new year is celebrated by a symbolic feast of simple foods corresponding to certain basic elements of nature, such as salt, corn and unfermented grape juice.

The Rosicrucian order is a non-religious but philosophical fraternity. It maintains that its traditional origin was in the reign of Amenhotep IV in 1350 B.C., and the order commemorates this ancient new year beginning with a ceremony that embraces the allegorical significance of the old Egyptian rites. Also March 21 is the beginning of the fiscal year of all Rosicrucian lodges, chapters and provinces throughout the world, and the date is marked by the installation of new ritualistic and administrative officers.
