Electric Rate Cut Allowed
 Public Utilities Commissioner Charles H. Heltzel today signed an order providing for a $302,000 annual electric rate reduction by Pacific Power & Light Company for its Coos Bay and Willamette Valley divisions on less than statutory notice.
 The new rate schedules will become effective April 22, to provide savings to customers in the Coos Bay district of Pacific Power & Light Company of approximately $242,000 annually and in the Willamette Valley districts of approximately $60,000 annually.
 The new schedules will provide uniform rates in the coast districts of the company.
 The reductions are in keeping with the commissioner's order issued in April 1954, permitting the merger of Pacific Power & Light Company and Mountain States Power Company.

Currant Flies Now Emerging

First spray or dust for Willamette valley currant and gooseberry has been recommended as soon as possible.
 First yellow currant flies have been found in the two emergence cages at the C. E. Bradley farm at Hubbard. The first flies were discovered Tuesday by Bradley who has been making daily checks of the cages since they were erected April 5.

County Extension Agent D. L. Rasmussen and Robert W. Every, Oregon State College entomology specialist, recommended a spray containing 3 pounds, 50 per cent methoxychlor wettable powder in 100 gallons of water. Growers with a leaf spot problem can mix methoxychlor in Bordeaux mixture 8-8-1 — or add 2 pound Captan or 2 pounds Ferbam to 100 gallons of methoxychlor spray.
 After the first spray has been applied, growers should apply additional spray at not more than 7 to 10 day intervals until the berries are harvested with a additional sprays after heavy rains.
 It is pointed out that it is also important that the grower spray not only the currant and gooseberry bushes but also interplanted trees as well as trees, brush and other plants adjoining the berry field.
 Backyard gardeners having a bush or two may find it practical to completely cover their bushes with cheese cloth to prevent the flies from laying their eggs on the skin of the fruit.
 Those preferring a dusting program are recommended to a five per cent methoxychlor dust using 30 to 35 pounds of the dust per acre.

Clown and Acrobat Wed, Show Goes on as Usual

By ELIZABETH TOOMEY
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 NEW YORK (UP)—Ladecies and gentlemen... step right this way to see the only wedding party of its kind... a clown charivari performed today... to celebrate the marriage of famed clown Emmet Kelly and acrobat Elveria Gebhardt.
 The star clown and the tiny blonde acrobat from Leipzig, Germany, decided to have a morning wedding so they wouldn't be late for the matinee of Ringling Brothers.
 Only a few circus friends were invited to witness the simple civil ceremony performed by Mayor Francis J. Murphy of Cliffside Park, N.J., in the Edgewater, N.J. home of Joseph A. Skelly, county registrar of vital statistics.
 But circus sentiment got the best of the clowns. They stayed late in the deserted circus headquarters Wednesday night to rehearse their clown charivari. It was hastily substituted for the three-minute clown baseball game usually staged during the matinee performance.
 There was a beachball painted black and a chain made of rope to attach to Kelly's tattered iron-ear leg, and a bouquet of flowers with a rubber band to fasten around the clowns neck so the flowers would snap back in his face as he handed them to the 22-year-old bride.
 "If I'd had more notice, I could have fixed up more things," Paul Jung, the clown in charge of the charivari said apologetically on the eve of the wedding.
 Kelly, 56, whose ragged, pathetic figure has made millions laugh since he joined his first circus 25 years ago, began going out with the youthful acrobat a year ago. Last week they announced they would be married.
 Kelly, a quiet, serious man who paints and reads in his spare time, asked a "his circus friends not to make 'too much of a to-do' about his wedding. He was married twice previously to circus aerialists and has two sons, Emmett Jr., 29, a railroad switch-tender and Thomas Patrick, 19, a Marine. Both marriages ended in divorce.
 "This will work out," Elveria said confidently. "Emmett is so good and kind and we get along so well together."
 "She's a wonderful cook," the sad-faced clown said. "I think her stuffed cabbage rolls are the best."

Health Groups Ask for Help

PORTLAND (AP)—Health officials are appealing to Oregon residents to see to it that young children and pregnant women get the Salk polio vaccine as it becomes available.
 Letters are going to all Oregon physicians, asking them to help see that the persons most susceptible get the first polio shots. They urged the vaccine be used only for expectant mothers and children 1 to 14 years old.
 The public was urged to cooperate.
 Dr. Harold M. Erickson, state health officer, and Dr. A. O. Pitman, president of the State Medical Society, are sending the joint letter.
 "If sufficient vaccine is available by fall, the 15-30 age group should also be given the opportunity to have these immunizations," they said.
 Health officials said no word yet has been received on when to expect shipments of the vaccine for school children.
