

Marion County
In Good Shape

"Marion county is in excellent financial condition and we expect to keep it that way," commented County Judge Rex Hartley as he stated emphatically that "we will balance the budget" without much change in the millage rate in spite of the necessity of appropriating $100,000 as the initial installment in a county-wide re-appraisal program that will begin early in July.

The budget as compiled from requests of the various departments of county government is around $2,650,000—slightly more than $32,000 in excess of a year ago.

Whether the budget committee, which includes Judge Hartley, Commissioner Roy Rice and E. L. Rogers and citizens Harley Libby of Jefferson, Pat McLaughlin of Woodburn and V. T. Golden of Salem, will consider a blanket salary increase was not indicated by Judge Hartley. However, several of the departments are asking for higher pay for their employees. Sheriff Denver Young and District Attorney Kenneth Brown are expected to put up strong appeals for additional pay for their deputies. Both have said they have had difficulty in keeping assistants because of poor pay.

Judge Hartley is strongly in favor of the reappraisal program and has worked toward that end virtually ever since he entered office. In this connection he recently pointed out instances where the assessed valuation both city and county property were considerably out of line.

Blue Lake Plan to Protect Trademark

F. M. Smith, president of the Associated Blue Lake Green Bean Canners, Inc., today revealed in Portland a trademark protection plan for "Mr. Blue Lake" that is considered to be a selling first in commodity promotions.

Beginning with the 1953 promotion program, when the selling theme was "Meet Mr. Blue Lake" a trade character was drawn, showing a green bean in formal dress to support the sales line "The Aristocrat of the Green Bean Family." So popular did Mr. Blue Lake become that the Blue Lake canners engaged the Portland patent firm of Cook and Schermerhorn to file copyrights of all printed matter and to apply for trademark registrations in the government patent office. These steps have been accomplished.

Customers requested to use Mr. Blue Lake on their own labels from members of the group of Pacific Northwest canners who, as an association, have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars to promote Blue Lake variety canned green beans. After three months of committee work and with the help of the patent attorneys, a plan was created to give private label buyers everywhere an opportunity to identify their brands with the nationally popular Blue Lakes from Oregon and Washington.

Dean Sabine
To Leave U of O

EUGENE (AP)—Gordon F. Sabine, 38, resigned Friday as dean of the University of Oregon journalism school to become dean of the school of communication arts at Michigan State University.

Sabine, one of the nation's youngest collegiate journalism administrators, has been at the university here since 1948 and became dean in 1950.

President O. Meredith Wilson announced the resignation, effective July 1.

The school of communication arts in a new academic development being launched by Michigan State University. Besides journalism the school will include speech and other arts connected with communications.

Dr. Wilson said in a statement: "We regret very much the loss of Dean Sabine. He has headed the journalism school through one of its greatest periods of development. Michigan State University is gaining an outstanding administrator."

Secretary of Interior Douglas McKay today announced reorganization of Alaska Fish and Wildlife service activities into two major fields—commercial fisheries, and sport fishery and wildlife management.

McKay said the change reflects the importance of the commercial fishing industry to Alaska. He said it does not represent a departure from regional organization in the continental United States under which all functions are under a single field director.

Salmon fishing, Alaska's most important industry, suffered a sharp decline during the past 10 years in some parts of Alaska, McKay said. He said a program was started last year to help restore the industry with appointment of a special commercial fisheries administrator.

The new reorganization will amplify the separate management that existed in 1954 and provide more direct authority in continuing the salmon program, he said.
