Possible Changes in GI Home Loan Studied

By UNITED PRESS

Congressional investigators today planned an inquiry to determine whether changes are needed in the GI home loan program.

The House Veterans Committee called for the investigation after studying reports on 6,000 GI loans and coming up with some findings which it called worrisome.

It noted that in one area where there were 87 defaults on home loans the defaulting owner in each case was someone other than the GI to whom the government-backed loan originally was made.

It also found that in numerous cases, a veteran had sold his home moved away and then discovered months or years later that the buyer had defaulted and the veteran was left holding the bag.

There were other cases where veterans defaulted after years of paying on their loans and wound up with a bigger debt than they started with. Frequently the property failed to bring enough to settle the claim.

Chairman Olin E. Teague (D-Tex) said the committee had drawn no conclusions about the findings by its staff "but they certainly warrant investigation."

Other congressional news:

H-Bomb: Dr. Ralph E. Lapp, nuclear physicist, told a Senate civil defense subcommittee Friday he believes the H-bomb exploded by the United States in the Pacific in 1954 was a "revolutionary" one. He said he deduced this from public records on the explosion indicating there was "fantastically great" radioactivity which an ordinary H-bomb would not have produced. He criticized the Atomic Energy Committee for not stressing how long such radioactivity persists.

Foreign Aid: Sen. John J. Sparkman (D-Ala), a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said he is opposed to any reductions "either on the military or the economic side" of the foreign aid program. He objected to a proposal by Sen. Mike Mansfield (D-Mont) to trim 317-million dollars from the "new money" authorized in the President's proposed 33,530,000,000 aid program.

Highways: Sen. Norris Cotton (R-NH) charged that a Democratic substitute for President Eisenhower's program of federal aid for highway construction will place too much of a financial burden on states in putting up matching funds. He defended a controversial feature of the President's plan to help finance expansion of the highway system through issuance of 21-billion dollars in special bonds outside the public debt which would be retired with increases in gasoline tax revenue.

MacDuffie? Marshall MacDuffie New York lawyer who visited Russia extensively in 1953 and interviewed Soviet boss Nikita Khrushchev, has been named counsel of the Senate Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights. MacDuffee is the author of prize-winning magazine articles and a best-selling book about his trips. Chairman Thomas C. Hennings (D-Mo) said the subcommittee has formally organized for "an active," hard-hitting investigation of concrete abuses" of the Bill of Rights.

Plunge Fatal To Performer

SPOKANE (AP) —A broken sway pole plunged a woman performer 100 feet to her death late Friday night, chilling the cheers of 14,000 gay Lilac Show spectators.

Mrs. Jackie Litzman, 36, San Diego, died soon after being rushed to a hospital, succumbing to multiple fractures and internal injuries.

She was doing a solo act on the slender, high pole when the reinforced steel, ladderlike structure below broke about one-third of the way from the ground.

The audience gasped as the pole arched, then screams filled Memorial Stadium as Mrs. Litzman fell clear.

Beno Litzman, partner in the act billed as the Saturns, slipped to the ground from his position on the ladder and ran to where his wife lay. Other performers attempted to distract the attention of the audience while doctors worked over the woman's body.

She was taken to the hospital and the show continued but some of the spectators grew restive and left.
