FROM Peg in Washington

BY ALENE (PEG) PHILLIPS

Washington, D. C., May 16

Dear Marian:

Annually there is a Flower Mart at the Washington Cathedral and it is a colorful affair that draws big crowds. Herbs from the gardens of the Cathedral are sold, as well as flowers, and this year a typical English tea party was a special feature. Pouring over wives of the members of the British Embassy staff, and with large picture hats, elaborate gowns and tuffs of tulle about the neck, they were dressed to bring back memories of the Edwardian period and its dowagers. Other staff wives dressed as maids, with black uniforms and white aprons, collars, cuffs, and caps with long black streamers, served the thin slices of buttered bread, the scones, and small cakes of the customary English tea.

Yesterday was Herb Creek Park Day in Washington, so proclaimed by Secretary of the Interior and by Samuel Spencer, president of the District Board of Commissioners, to call attention to the recreational and scenic aspects of the wooded area that runs through the city. A horseback ride by an early president of a local bank in the 1880s brought to the rider the idea of setting aside the creek area as a place to be preserved and on Thanksgiving Day, 1888, with three others who joined him in another ride, a pledge was made to develop the park. Efforts to obtain Congressional approval for the designation of the park lagged until the original sponsor began to encourage members of the Congress to join him in rides through the shady groves along the creek. And in 1890, the bill was passed and the 1800-acre park now enjoyed by countless thousands each year was the result. The proclamation was signed by the Secretary and the Commissioner in a picnic area beside a waterfall on a wonderfully mild spring day. As a present-day user of the trails in the park, Secretary McKay has high praise for that earlier rider who envisioned what the area would mean in the midst of a busy city.

In addition to the western regional dinner of the Republican women which was mentioned yesterday, Mrs. McKay attended two other functions of the week in Republican party circles. One was the luncheon at which President Eisenhower spoke informally to the women and the other was the tea given by Mrs. Sherman Adams in the Adams home in Rock Creek Park—a large stone house that the family has adapted for comfortable and secluded living.

On Mother's Day Mrs. McKay was the guest at a mother-daughter dinner of Miss Margaret Forsythe, a Salem resident who is now with one of the Federal Departments in Washington. The dinner was at the National Presbyterian church which both attend and it was a pleasant occasion for the "borrowed" mother and the "adopted" daughter.

Salem and Portland friends of Mrs. Oliver Crowther can be proud of the role she played as chairman of the Citizens Advisory Committee on Military Services. It is an active group of serious-minded women who are making a contribution to the government to aid the work of women in the military forces. Mrs. Crowther has been here for several days and has been the guest of Mrs. Robert O. Boyd, whose husband is on the Federal Mediation Board. During the long days and nights when the settlement of the L&N railroad strike has been before the board, the board members have literally lived in the Interior building where their offices are located. All night sessions, with maybe a quick nap on a desk top or huddled in a chair, marked the closing week of the deliberations.

During the past week Secretary McKay was one of four officials who were presented with Freedom Foundation Awards. In a ceremony in the old Supreme Court chambers at the Capitol, the Secretary of the Interior received his award for the Lincoln Memorial during the Washington Pilgrimage last year. One of the members on the nationwide committee of judges who designated the winners was Supreme Court Justice Walter Tozze, of Salem. At the same program, Joseph Formick and Kenneth Epley of Salem were the teacher-student team from Salem receiving the award and Mrs. Justin Smith and Miss Carol Denman were the team members from Medford. The awards included the trips to the east coast which both teachers and students are enjoying.

With overseas shots for smallpox, typhus, typhoid, and tetanus well out of the way, with passports about to be issued, and with clothes mentally packed (which means figuring how "light" one can travel), it is just ten days before the McKays and your Washington correspondent fly the Atlantic. Just two weeks from today we'll be watching a bull fight in Madrid—or as Mrs. McKay says she will "either be watching it or have my hat over my face while the others watch." So... hasta manana.
