Air Guardsmen Present Governors' Day Review

GOWEN FIELD, Boise, Ida.—Oregon Air National Guardsmen, with those from Idaho, Washington and Montana, who compose the 142nd Wing of the Air National Guard, presented their annual Governors' Day review here Wednesday.

Oregon's Governor Paul Peterson was unable to attend and was represented by Maj. Gen. Thomas E. Rilea, adjutant general for Oregon. Among the other Oregonians in the group was the chief of staff for air, Brig. Gen. G. Robert Dodson, who has been here for the entire camp, which got underway July 9 and ends this Saturday.

As a part of the review, the oldest and chief test pilot for North American Aviation, a Mr. Hoover, gave a demonstration in one of the F86 jets of the Montana National Guard. Hoover, who only last week, hailed out of an F100, picked a plane at random and put it through all types of tests, rolls, aerobatics, slow flying and landing on one wheel.

On the field Wednesday and open to visitors was an RC-121, four-engine Super Constellation, which is a radar picket ship and the early warning type of plane. The plane has a crew of 25 men and is equipped with radar. It usually stays out at sea about 15 hours at a time. After the troops had passed in review a reception was held at the officers club here.

The temperature here for the review Wednesday was at 93 degrees. It was said to be among the cooler days, as the thermometer has been climbing to 103 and 105 degrees.

Combined strength of the 143rd fighter interceptor group training here is 2,300 airmen and officers and of that number 839 are from Oregon. Oregon which has the 123rd fighter interceptor squadron and its elements, has the largest group here. Other squadrons of the wing are the 190th fighter interceptor squadron from Idaho, the 196th fighter interceptor squadron of Montana, and the 116th fighter interceptor squadron from Washington. Commanding the 142nd fighter interceptor wing is Col. Frank W. Frost of Spokane.

Among the visitors at the camp this year have been Brig. Gen. Sam Agee, commander of the Ninth Air Division, Air Defense Command and Maj. Gen. Winston P. Wilson, chief of the Guard Bureau's air section.

Wilson during his visit brought word that the squadrons of the 142nd are being given new mission assignments and being redesignated as all-weather fighter interceptor squadrons. This means that instead of flying the F-86s the men will be given F94s built by Lockheed and the way is opened for training of new rated personnel.

The new planes, slated to arrive within 90 days, will have a pilot and a radar observer. The plane, loaded with electronics gear, permits the radar observer to spot a target at night or in thick weather without actually seeing it.

Each of the four squadrons of the 42nd wing will receive two B-25-Ks, light bombers filled with radar equipment, which are to be used in training their men and familiarizing pilots with the electronics system of interception.

Among those here for training are 25 from Salem and the nearby area with 19 of the group having Salem addresses.

Salem men are Lt. Col. Thomas M. Wood, Capt. Everett D. Ede, Capt. Harold C. Lentz, First Lt. Gert W. Hays, Jr., Second Lt. Earl L. Cayton, A/B James S. Anderson, Staff Sgt. William M. Austin, Staff Sgt. Ernest H. Drapela, A 2/c Tracy A. Gilman, A 2/c Eugene A. Harris, A 2/c Laurell M. Long, A 2/c Billy F. Mager, A 3/c John F. McDonald, A 3/c Kenneth E. Morris, A 3/c James R. Patterson, A 2/c Richard D. Pedice, Pvt. Joseph R. Renault and Pvt. Vilas E. Roysse. Others are Maj. Robert E. Renn, A 1/c Joseph I. Labansky, Rex W. Bothum, A 2/c Robert A. Gregory and A2/c Gordon Patrick McLaughlin, all of Woodburn and Maj. Dwight M. Webb, Dallas.

Both Ben. Dodson and Gen. Rilea commented on the fine camp this year. Dodson said it was the best yet and Rilea, who has attended every camp starting in postwar days, said it was superior and the training outstanding.

The 3,000-ton Seawolf is a trimmer, sleeker ship than the Nautilus. Unlike the bulbous snout of the Nautilus, the Seawolf has a sharp bow.

In his speech, Thomas said the Navy, with eight atomic submarines already authorized, hopes to build many others "in rapid succession thereafter."

Cops Give Blood Salem Ahead of Eugene in Bldg.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—The police chief of Drain, Ore., found plenty of friends on the Minneapolis police force just when he needed them.

The Oregon man and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Winslow, brought their 13-year-old son here for a heart operation. Physicians at the Variety Club Heart Hospital at the University of Minnesota said 18 pints of fresh blood would be needed for the operation next Wednesday.

Winslow knew no one here, but went to police headquarters and told his story to Inspector Pat Walling.

Word went out to the force and shortly 13 policemen had volunteered blood. Walling said he was sure the other five donors also would be found on the force.

Building permits in 19 Oregon cities amounted to $43,734,535 in the first six months of 1955, a seven percent gain over the $40,812,004 issued in the first half of 1954, according to figures just released by the Equitable Savings & Loan Assn. of Portland, which keeps construction statistics on the principal cities of the Northwest states.

Salem led Eugene by nearly a million dollars this year, with $3,345,091, but lagged 40 percent below the unusually high $5,553,410 reported in the first half of 1954. Portland led with $24,700,050, a 21 percent gain. The figures for the two six months periods follow:

New Record In Production

WASHINGTON (AP)—American production took a surprising leap to a record rate of 363 billion dollars annually in the April-June quarter, the President's Council of Economic Advisors announced Thursday.

A whole sheaf of other new records—in personal income, consumer spending, employment, and industrial output—were disclosed in the council's monthly publication, "Economic Indicators."

These figures established the second quarter as the high-water mark of business activity in the country's history. Among the major indexes, only farm income declined.

The new production rate was $7,700,000,000 above the previous high—attained in the first quarter.

The social worker positions to be filled are located in various federal agencies in Washington, D.C. and vicinity; the occupational therapist posts in St. Elizabeth's hospital and the government in the District of Columbia.
