Tass Employe Won't Talk on Russian Spies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Harry Freeman, top ranking American employe of the Soviet news agency Tass, declined Tuesday to tell Senate investigators whether he has associated with any Russian spies.

Freeman replied with a firm "no," however, when asked if he had been "guilty of espionage at any time."

Deputy manager of the American bureau of Tass, with headquarters in New York CITY, Freeman testified before the Senate Internal Security subcommittee.

Chairman Eastland (D Miss) has described the hearings as an inquiry into the extent to which "Soviet power" operates in this country through organizations other than the Communist Party.

Freeman, who said he has been employed by Tass since 1929, swore that he has not been a member of the Communist Party since 1941. He invoked the Fifth Amendment on the period prior to that.

Two other Tass employes, Hays Jones and Mrs. Sasha Small Lurie, followed Freeman's lead and said they have not been Communist Party members since joining the agency. Both refused under the Fifth Amendment to say whether they were Communists immediately before going to work for Tass.

Jones denied he was the "Comrade Jones" who addressed a meeting of the Communist International in 1928.

Mrs. Lurie refused to say whether she was the "Sasha Small" who wrote pamphlet urging housewives and others to join the Communist Party.

Freeman, at the outset of his testimony, was permitted to read a statement in which he said that "the activities of Tass are those of any large news bureau."

Sen. Jenner (R-Ind) told him the subcommittee was interested in Tass operations because it had received sworn testimony that the news agency was "used for espionage in this country and throughout the world."

Yuri Rostvorov, a former Soviet agent in Tokyo who defected to the West two years ago, testified recently that 80 to 90 per cent of the employes of Tass are Soviet military or political agents.

ICC Approves Rail Protests

The Interstate Commerce Commission gave the 11 Western states permission Tuesday to protest against an effort by Eastern railroads to get a bigger slice of transcontinental freight revenues.

The information was telephoned from Washington, D. C., by Clifford W. Ferguson, Oregon's supervisor of rail transportation.

Ferguson, who will represent the Western states in the case, said the proposal would cost the Western railroads more than 60 million dollars a year. He said this would make it impossible for the Western railroads to build badly-needed boxcars.

Ferguson said the ICC would hold hearings on the matter in May and June, with one probably to be held in Portland.

Ferguson argued Monday before the ICC against the railroads' request for a 7 per cent increase in freight rates. He also represented the 11 Western states in this case.

Oregon Cuts Traffic Toll

Oregon is one of only 13 states which reported fewer traffic deaths last year than in 1954, Secretary of State Earl T. Newbry reported Tuesday.

He said that Oregon had a 3 per cent reduction, while California and Washington had increases of 10 and 12 per cent, respectively.

Oregon had 410 deaths, compared with 422 in 1954.

For the nation as a whole, there was an 8 per cent increase.

Eugene Talks About Voting On Fluorides

EUGENE (AP) — Fluoridation of Eugene's drinking water "awaits more desire on the part of the people," L. W. Trommlitz, chairman of the Eugene Water and Electric Board, declared Monday night.

He said he feels final authorization for adding fluorides to the city's water supply should come from a referendum vote.

Fluoridation came up for a brief discussion at the meeting after each of the board members received a pamphlet against the idea, sent by the Anti-Fluoridation League.

Board member Earl McNutt said he's talked to dentists "and they think it's a good thing."

Olaf Houglum, another board member, recalled that dentists led a campaign to get fluorides added to Eugene's water supply several years ago.

"It will probably come up again," he said.

Eugene's City Council sometime ago gave the water board permission to add fluorides to the water. The local utility tabled the program after a post card poll of users showed a slight margin against the idea.

World Situation Opportunity For Church, Speaker Declares

An audience of more than 400 gathered at the First Christian church Monday night at the opening session of the Oregon Christian Assembly which continues through Tuesday.

Dr. A. Dale Fiers, of Indianapolis, Ind., president of the United Christian Missionary Society, told the assembled church workers that the revolutionary character of the world today gives the Disciples of Christ an unusual opportunity to guide backward countries as they build their national existence.

In this country, Dr. Fiers said, the disciples will have to increase their evangelistic activity to meet their share of responsibility in increasing church membership.

Disciples of Christ came into being to promote unity among the churches of the world, Dr. Fiers told representatives of churches from over the state.

Another distinguished lay-reader who addressed the assembly at the Monday night session was Mrs. James D. Wyker, immediate past president of the general department of United Church Women of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. She spoke on the theme, "The Disciples and the Women of the World."

Mrs. Rosa Page Welch of Chicago, Ill., world traveller and ambassador-at-large for the Disciples of Christ, opened the session with a concert of sacred music.

All three of the visiting lay leaders are participating in the discussion today and will be heard again at tonight's session of the assembly at 7:30 o'clock.

The Rev. Myron C. Cole, pastor of the First Christian church at Portland, presided over this morning's session of the assembly which was devoted largely to panel discussions around the theme, "The Missionary Movement in the Local Church." Moderators in the five sections into which these discussions were divided included A. W. Mortensen, chairman of the stewardship and finance commission of the Oregon Christian Missionary convention; Rev. Donald B. Payne, pastor of the First Christian church at Pendelton; Rev. Gene Robinson, pastor of the First Christian church, La Grande; Mrs. E. G. Gilbert, chairman, World Outreach commission, Oregon Christian Missionary Movement; and Mrs. Clarence H. Elliott, director of Christian House, Eugene.

This afternoon's program which will be presided over by the Rev. Marion I. Nilsson, pastor of the Malory Avenue Christian church, Portland, will hear leaders of five different Protestant denominations discuss "The Missionary Movement Among All Christians." These include the Rev. Gerald Emerson, assistant pastor, First Presbyterian church, Salem; Rev. George Rosebarry, superintendent, Salem district, Methodist church; Mrs. Maurice B. Hodges, president, Baptist Women of North America; Rev. Julian J. Keiser, pastor, First Congregational church, Salem, and Rev. L. O. White, pastor, First Christian church, Lebanon.

Mrs. Rosa Page Welch will be the speaker at a Brotherhood Banquet to be held at the First Christian church at 6:00 p.m., immediately preceding the final session of the assembly which will close with observance of the Lord's Supper at 9:30 p.m.

Portland Bus Shutdown on Wages Looms

PORTLAND (AP)— The president of the Portland streetcarmen's union said Monday night that Rose City Transit Co. had threatened to shut down the Portland bus system unless drivers accept a company offered wage increase.

However, officials of the firm, which is operating the Portland bus system on a 60-day temporary permit, said that the union was not stating the company's position exactly. The spokesman said the firm was attempting to reach terms of a new contract with the union.

Charles Snook, head of the union, told the Portland Central Labor Council that the firm had issued a statement that "there will be no buses running after April 10 unless the offer is accepted by that date."

Terms of the offer were not disclosed. However, Snook said that the company had offered a "middling" wage increase nine months in advance of the expiration date of its contract with the union. Snook said the company wanted the new contract to run until November, 1957.

Rose City Transit took over the lines when the franchise held by Portland Traction Co. terminated earlier this month.

A pushbutton ticket printing machine at the ticket windows of British railway stations prints dates and issues tickets at the rate of 240 a minute eliminating the waiting cues of travelers, human error and clerical fatigue.
