Sentencing of Walter Lamkin Dated June 4

Walter Lamkin, Salem attorney, who pleaded guilty to a charge of embezzlement two weeks ago, will not be sentenced until June 4.

Originally scheduled to be sentenced Monday, the case was continued for two weeks upon the request of the state parole board, which asked more time in which to complete its investigation.

Lamkin appeared before Circuit Judge Frank Loneragan May 7 and entered his plea. The judge then announced he would pronounce sentence in two weeks, following an investigation.

The charge against Lamkin was filed by Mattie White, a widow who said the attorney had embezzled funds entrusted to him for investment.

3. Ruled 6-3 that conscientious objectors who failed to obey draft board orders to report for civilian work must be prosecuted in the district where the work was to be performed. The court rejected arguments by three conscientious objectors that the prosecution should occur in the district where the Selective Service registrant told his draft board he would not report for work. The cases grew out of draft board orders in Oklahoma and Pennsylvania.

4. Declined to rule on an appeal which questioned the validity of fluoridation of Cleveland's water supply. It was the fourth time the high court has refused to act on appeals involving fluoridation. The Christian Science Board of Directors supported the appeal, calling fluoridation "compulsory state medicine and a dangerous precedent."

state treasurer by about 15,000 votes. He will try to defeat Republican Sig Unander in November. Phil Roth, Portland attorney, topped a four-candidate field for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Third District. He will go against Democratic Rep. Edith Green in the fall.

Rep. Walter Norblad, Stayton, was the only one of Oregon's three Republican congressmen with opposition Friday. He swamped R. F. Cook, a Silverton turkey rancher, by nearly 47,000 votes. His Democratic rival in November will be Jason Lee, Salem, who captured the first district nomination by some 22,000 votes over Don H. Metheny.

In the Second District, Al Ullman, a strong public power advocate from Baker, won the right to oppose Republican Rep. Sam Coon for the second consecutive Gildewell by nearly 16,000 votes for the Second District Democratic nomination.

Porter Wins
Charles O. Porter, Eugene attorney, will have another go at Republican Rep. Harris Ellsworth of Roseburg. Porter captured the Democratic Fourth District Congressional nomination for the second straight time, beating Dave Shaw, Gold Beach attorney, by some 10,000 votes.

Two Portland attorneys were chosen as national committeemen. C. Girard Davidson, assistant secretary of the Interior in the Truman administration, led State Rep. Pat Dooley, Portland, by nearly 19,000 votes for Democratic committeeman. Robert Mautz, a University of Oregon football star in the 1920s, topped State Sen. John Merrifield by about 12,000 votes to become Republican committeeman.

Davidson replaces Monroe Sweetland and Mautz succeeds Jess Gard, Portland. Neither Sweetland nor Gard sought reelection.

W. Q. Quigley Rites Tuesday

Private funeral services will be held Tuesday, May 22 at 1 p.m. at the J. P. Finley & Sons Mortuary in Portland for William Quentin Quigley, who died Saturday at his Donald home. He had been in poor health for sometime.

Survivors are the widow, a stepdaughter, Mrs. Arthur C. Hildebrand, Astoria; brother, L. L. Quigley, Portland.

Mr. Quigley was born June 24, 1877 in Minneapolis, Minn. A builder by trade he had lived in Portland until retirement 15 years ago when the family moved to Donald.

He was a member of the Builders Exchange of Portland, having been a building contractor for 50 years. He built many of the buildings on Eugene and Corvallis campus and helped build many schools, hospitals and hotels over the state. He was a member of the Donald city council.

Interment will be in Lincoln Memorial park, Portland, and the family requests no flowers, but donations may be made to the heart fund in his memory.

H-Bomb Drop

plan called for detonation at 5:51 a.m. It came at precisely that moment, which was 21 minutes after noon, Eastern Standard Time, Sunday.

Down on the observer ship Mt. McKinley, the sky was still starlit. The ship rolled slowly. It barely kept its way, and 15 newsmen and 16 federal civil defense officials stood silently on the port side.

The ship was 34 nautical miles (39 land miles) from the blast.

High-density goggles made the bluish-blackness, then a pinpoint of light, pricked the darkness, then rolled slowly and enormously into a gigantic fireball. No sun, nor hundreds of suns, ever equal the light of a hydrogen bomb.

Even through the dark lenses of the goggles the light was intense, washing the sky in brilliance to the zenith and then on to the horizon. The sea reflected it, silver white. Then color came into the fireball. It seemed to dim slightly.

An observer cautiously pulled down his goggles to take a look, then snapped them back on swiftly when the glare seared his vision. The fireball, which had appeared to rest its bottom a few degrees above the horizon at the instant of its creation, now started to ascend swiftly.

Out of the blackness a fabulous flaming sword thrust up. Its point climbed upward and upward, seeking to pierce the escaping fireball. It was the glowing stem of the mushroom cloud formed at the level of the sea and earth.

Below the stem the ugly, dirty gray of coral dust and spray from the sea swelled outward half a dozen miles in what nuclear weaponers call the base surge. At no time did the mushroom cloud ever appear to observers in complete, unobstructed view. Portions of it were hidden behind strata of tropical clouds.
