

Stone Slab Tells Cause of Death of Scio Knife Victim

By BEN MAXWELL
Capital Journal Writer

James A. Young, who died "from the effects of wounds with a knife" wielded by Charley Thomas 92 years ago, lies buried in the cemetery adjacent to Pleasant Grove church erected in 1858 and now the oldest Presbyterian church standing in Oregon.

Gravestone of James A. Young in Pleasant Grove church cemetery relates that he died "from the effects of wounds with a knife." He was fatally stabbed in Scio by Charley Thomas, March 30, 1864 and died at the age of 29.

Scio in the 1860s was a rough and tumble frontier village with something of reputation for brawling. During the morning of March 30, 1864 Jim Young and Charley Thomas were engaged in a loud and violent quarrel that resulted in a knife fight.

But their hopes were short lived. During the afternoon Charley Thomas followed his adversary into a Scio store and there assailed him with a knife. He stabbed Young once and then stabbed him again and again. Jim Young reeled and collapsed on the floor a mere mile. Within 10 minutes he was dead at the age of 29 leaving a young widow and several tots to mourn his death.

Salem Woman Joins Family

Mrs. Clarence Hileman, whose five-year-old daughter, Deanna, was killed and husband and four-year-old son, Gregory, seriously injured in an auto accident Monday near Albuquerque, N. M., left here by plane Wednesday to go to her family.

Pleasant Grove Presbyterian church on the road between West Stayton and Aumsville was organized January 1, 1855. The edifice is now the oldest and the second built by Presbyterians in Oregon. Completion date was 1858.

Salem Woman Joins Family

Hileman left Salem last Friday night with his children and was going to his former home in Georgia. His parents were also making the trip. Mrs. Hileman Monday filed suit for divorce in the Marion county circuit court and asked custody of the children.

NewsHandling Of Ike Illness Is Questioned

Public Controversy Brought About by Present Reports

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP)—Something has come amiss in the fine mechanism of White House public relations. It is too soon to know whether the disclosure is serious and permanent, but it easily could be both.

Just about every circumstance relating to President Eisenhower's current illness and surgery has blended into an angry public controversy.

mosphere of angry political controversy in the field of medicine. Everyone wishes him speedy recovery, of course, but it would be unrealistic to believe that Democratic strategists want to face Mr. Eisenhower again in a presidential election. If the President's convalescence turned out to be much slower than his attendants have predicted, the democrats could take the news gracefully.
