

An Underhand Sort of Trick

This sort of thing is always going on at Miami Beach, which is one of the nicer things about Miami Beach. The girl is demonstrating how she feels with just the right combination of sun, sand and surf to inspire her. She just fills right up with well, joie de vivre. If you're still reading instead of looking at the picture, her name is Elaine Deming. No phone number available. All right, Elaine—let's see you do it with no hands. (AP Wirephoto)

Should This Young Divorcee Wed a Man 18 Years Older?

By DOROTHY DIX

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I am a young woman of 21, divorced and the mother of a 4-year-old daughter. I married very young and made an unwise choice. I've been divorced two years and in that time have had more wild flings than most girls have in a lifetime.

This spring I met an exceptional man, one I can really trust, respect and admire. He has tamed me down to being a quiet, respectable person again, and to tell the truth I like things much better this way. He loves me, wants to marry me, but there is an 18-year gap between us.

He's afraid I'm too young to be tied down to a man so much older. Another thing is that it's a bit hard to convince him I am really a home-type girl.

Sam loves children, is devoted to my little girl, as she is to him. He has a fine position. I know everyone could be happy if Sam's qualms could be overcome.—Floise

DEAR ELOISE: Your attitude and behavior are the most important thing and how, in a few short months, can you change from a careless, carefree lass to a settled-down domestic type? How do you know you have so many innate homey qualities when you've never tried to exercise them? How do you know cooking, housework, baby care won't bore you?

Sam's established financial position isn't enough to accomplish a miracle. Being a housewife is a tough job, and it needs more preparation than the mere promise "I can do it." A warning period is needed here. Don't become engaged just yet. Give yourselves a chance to become acquainted and as your friendship grows, so will Sam's confidence in you. This is when he needs to overcome all doubts, but you need the purpose and determination to have him believe in you. With so much to gain, can you do it?

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I'm a woman in my late forties and, as I like to travel, do quite a bit of it by myself. I have been told this is not in good taste. What do you think?—Happy Traveler

DEAR TRAVELER: The old traveling you want to do, the more the better. Even Europe is considered a happy hunting ground for a lone sightseer. Send me a card if you get there.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: Although I am a very attractive girl of 21, I am hard of hearing, which is the cause of all my unhappiness. I never have dates. Boys are just friendly to me. Is it because of my handicap?—Unhappy

DEAR UNHAPPY: Hearing aids are made so attractive, and can be worn so inconspicuously, that I don't understand your not having one. Do see about getting one and I'm sure the dates will come.
