AAUW Supports Educational Programs

Salem branch of the American Association of University Women, with a membership ranging from 275 to 300, is the largest unit of the group in Oregon outside of Portland, and as such is a major women's organization in the capital city.

Mrs. Russel W. Beutler is president of the local branch for the coming year. Educational opportunities for women are the overall interests of AAUW with national and international study grants its specific projects. The national grants are on the graduate level while the international grants are for both graduate study and for undergraduates, the latter being carried on as international relations projects as well as educational ones. AAUW membership is made up of women graduates of accredited colleges and universities, associate memberships being extended to those who have completed two years of academic work in accredited institutions.

Nationally, the AAUW has won world recognition for its study grants. Over a long period of years many women have been brought to this country for university or college study and for graduate work, and in recent years the AAUW has sent American women to other countries under its grant program.

Salem branch has contributed thousands of dollars since organized in 1922 to the national and state fellowship and grant program, and in recent years has set up two name-grant fellowships of its own. The most recent one was the $500 grant established last year and named in honor of Mrs. Floyd L. Utter, a past president. Some years ago, a similar grant was named for Miss Beryl Holt, a past local and state president.

In addition to its educational interests the local branch carries on an active schedule of meetings and interesting programs for its members, as well as several study groups or special interest groups—in literature, arts, travel, groups for pre-school mothers, recent graduate group, etc. Outside speakers are often brought here for the monthly luncheon programs, and through the year several social events are staged by the branch. The local branch has a unique student loan fund for undergraduates in education.

Mrs. Beutler is a member through her work at University of Oregon. Outside AAUW Mrs. Beutler is active in Order of Eastern Star and its kindred organizations. She is a past worthy matron of Salem chapter, OES, is a member of Salem club, Daughters of the Nile, and has been active in the work of Job's Daughters for the younger girls. She has served on the council for Bethel No. 43 of Job's Daughters.

"My family is my main interest, hence my special interest in Job's Daughters," Mrs. Beutler says. Her daughter, Shirley Kay, is in the new Bethel, and is a junior in high school. The son, Robert, is a sophomore in high school. Mr. Beutler is with the Beutler-Quistad Lumber company.

Community Betterment Aided by Club

Each year, West Salem Woman's club plans one big benefit for some community betterment project. Last year its benefit was for the playground in the park adjoining the new school.

In addition, the club assists with Camp Fire Girls, Blue Birds and other community organizations, as well as carrying on a program of social activity for its members.

Mrs. Dale Worthington is president of the club this year, the group numbering 65 members. The club has been an active organization in its community since its formation in 1937.

Mrs. Worthington served the club as vice president this past year. The club at present is Mrs. Worthington's main interest outside her home. In her family are a daughter, Linda, who is in the second grade; and a pre-school age son, Michael. Mrs. Worthington, a native Oregonian, has lived in Salem for the past 21 years, coming from LaGrande. Her husband is with the Mennis Oil company.
