Some Ankey School District Residents to Get Tax Refund

The court signed an order directing the county clerk to draw warrants on the county treasurer totalling $3,799 for reimbursement of a number of persons who pooled their interests and placed them in the hands of W. H. Stevely, resident of the district.

Another order authorizes reimbursement of Edna M. Francis in the sum of $115.66.

Prior to Jan. 1, 1952 Ankey district was a fully organized and operating school unit. Then came the division upon petition of certain property owners with approximately one half of the area being annexed to Jefferson and the balance to Salem.

Notwithstanding this division, all of the $8,602.15 budget was assessed against all property owners regardless of which side of the dividing line they lived.

It took an act of the legislature to get the matter straightened out. It was estimated during a discussion of the matter Tuesday that the petitioning property owners will recover approximately 50 per cent of the money involved after legal fees are extracted.

State Receives $300,000 From Sale of Timber

Nearly nine million board feet of state timber appraised at $184,739, went to the Kropf Lumber company, which operates a mill west of Molalla, for $300,000 at a sale held at the Salem headquarters of the state forestry department.

The timber, located in the former holdings of the old Eastern & Western Lumber company, is in Clackamas county. Keen competition developed between the purchaser and Kingsley Lumber Co., Linnton, with a total of 186 individual bids before the final offer was presented. Assistant State Forester Ed. Schroeder said.

Stumpage included 6,003 thousand board feet green Douglas fir, 118 thousand board feet noble fir and white pine, 423 thousand board feet hemlock, and 2,138 thousand board feet of dead timber of various species.

Ten per cent of the gross income will be placed in a special fire suppression fund. The balance will be divided on the basis of 75 per cent to Clackamas county and 25 per cent to the state.

though there is a merry fight to get them.

The rostrum is about a third of the way from one end, with the delegates in front, the press to the rear, on floors that slope away from the center, making it impossible for a reporter to see what goes on on the opposite side. I can, by straining, see the Oregon banner, but nobody in the delegation.

Parade of Orators
Monday's opener saw the usual parade of orators, both men and women, all of whom appeared to be speaking well, but usually not heard from the press section. The convention is held in a buzz of conversation and clacking typewriters only a very strong voice can prevail against it. I found Congressman Judd of Minnesota about the only one I could understand at my place near the center of the section, till I moved into the Associated Press section a few feet from the rostrum.

All the resolutions went through unanimously the first day. Nobody seemed to be in a controversial mood, though there were many unflattering references to "those Democrats" by the speakers. Never was Adlai Stevenson mentioned, though Truman was severely criticized. Maybe he is to have an immortality like the Democrats gave Herbert Hoover for so many years.

Young GOP Parades
The Young Republicans stirred a little excitement by parading about the hall with convention banners when their turn on the program came. Why they paraded wasn't clear, but a parade or something more stirring than the speeches obviously was needed.

The convention stresses that it is the hundredth anniversary of the party. The delegates face a huge sign which includes a plaque with Lincoln and Eisenhower in the center with 1855 and 1956 at the sides, big words Peace and Prosperity at top and bottom.

Chairman Hall does a fine job handling a big meeting. He is a large, good-humored but very businesslike man, not as bald as Jim Farley but reminds one of him, for he does a similar job for his party.

One advantage of a seat behind the rostrum is that one can see the "Teleprompter" which unrolls the speaker's manuscript in front of him out of view of the audience, making it impossible for him to forget his lines, if he's had the script prepared in advance.

I came out to the Cow Palace in a bus with other reporters. I write my dispatches from the AP room just off the main auditorium. Typewriters and teletypes keep up a barrage of noise that mingles with a buzz of voices during recesses.

REDS GO UNDERGROUND
MOSCOW (AP) — Pravda said Tuesday the outlawed Communist Party in West Germany will continue to fight—presumably underground—for "a radiant new future for the German nation."
