This "Kiss and Tell" Girl Finds Herself Losing Friends

By DOROTHY DIX

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: We 12 girls have been friends since grade school. One of the girls goes in for heavy petting, and brags about it. Some of us have tried to talk to her, even though it isn't our business. If we are to continue being friends, she'll have to change. Many of the boys have got the idea we're the same way.—Girls.

DEAR GIRLS: Your friend is under the misapprehension that notoriety equals popularity. Setting her straight would be kindness, not interference.

Don't be apologetic. Point out what she's losing in respect from others and what she's risking. Wind up with the threat that, unless she changes, she'll be minus 11 girl friends.

Perhaps you could enroll the help of a sympathetic teacher, whose official word might carry the necessary authority.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: Two years ago I broke up with a girl I liked very much. I still miss her, in fact, I'm more in love with her than ever. When we meet on the street she just glances at me and says nothing. How can I get her attention again?—Bob.

DEAR BOB: Probably she's wondering, "How can I get his attention again?" Next time you meet her on the street, stop her, show how pleased you are to see her again, and ask, "How about a soda?"

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: Two years ago I came to this city, after giving birth to an illegitimate child in another state. I left the baby with my sister, who is married and childless. Now I'm going with a young man who has asked me to marry him. Should I tell him of my past?—Betty Anne.

DEAR BETTY ANNE: Yes. Eventually it will come out anyway. Too many people are involved in your secret for it to be kept quiet.

Any husband you acquire must be an understanding person. Let's hope this is the one.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: Two years ago, when I was in high school, I met a nice boy. We dated a few times, then he dropped school to join the Army. We corresponded for a while, then he stopped writing. On a recent visit home he called me and asked me to write.

Should I, or should I not? I love to write letters, but would hate to be rebuffed again.—Linda.

DEAR LINDA: Take a chance and write. If the boy doesn't answer, consider it laziness, not a rebuff.

Lots of people love to get letters, but take a long time answering them. Tell him you won't write again unless you hear from him—then make your letter so fascinating he can't wait for the next one.

Write Dorothy Dix for free leaflet D-26, "That First Job," or, if you have a problem, send it to her. In all cases, be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope and send request to her, care of this newspaper.

Soviet Ballet Troupe Skips British Tour

Worried About Repeat Of Shoplifting Incident

By ROY ESSOYAN

MOSCOW (AP)—The world-famous Bolshoi Theater ballet troupe today refused to make a scheduled London appearance—its first in the West—because of British refusal to quash shoplifting charges against a Soviet woman discus champion.

"What guarantee is there that a similar provocation like the one against Nina Ponomareva is not repeated against one of us?" leading members of the company said in a two-column letter published in the Soviet government organ Izvestia.

The management of the state-operated theater so far had not announced official cancellation of the widely publicized tour, but apparently the plans were off.

It was the second time international politics had halted the 180-year-old Bolshoi troupe's debut in the West. Just before it was to open in 1954 in Paris, the Indochinese fortress of Dien Bien Phu fell to the Communist North Vietnamese. French officials canceled the ballet engagement to forestall public demonstrations.

Officials at London's huge Covent Garden Opera House, where the troupe was to open a month's season Oct. 3, were shocked by the Russian action. But Soviet diplomats in London had hinted the soldout visit would be off unless the British police abandoned their hunt for Miss Ponomareva.

Miss Ponomareva, a 27-year-old Olympic champion, was arrested last month on a charge of trying to walk off with five cheap hats from a London store. Released on bail, she did not appear for trial. The Soviets called the charge against her a "fabricated provocation" and withdrew from the annual British-Soviet track meet for which she and a team had come to London.

Nina was not with the team when it left London, and the British think she is still in the Soviet Embassy there. The British Foreign Office rejected Russian requests that the charges be dropped, saying it could not interfere with the courts.

ROKs Capture Spies for Reds

SEOUL (AP) — South Korea's Counterintelligence Corps today announced the capture of two Communist spies and two confederates the night before they were to go to North Korea.

The spies were identified as Kim Dong Shik and Ahn Yung Seung.

The CIC said they lived in South Korea before the Korean War as members of the Labor party and moved North with the Reds when they were pushed back after their initial invasion success.

Later, the announcement said, the pair infiltrated back South and joined the Progressive party, which opposes President Syngman Rhee's Liberal party.

NEW YORK (AP)—A lady asks irritably if I ever liked any half-hour filmed program on television.

Why, yes, Madame, my personal favorite is "Crunch and Des," a package filmed series currently appearing on more than 150 TV stations around the country. It glues me to the set on its weekly appearance over a local station.

CHARLES MERCER

"Crunch and Des" is based on Philip Wylie's grand Saturday Evening Post stories about a couple of Florida fishermen ad their boat, the Posedion, and the interesting characters who enter their lives. It's an authentic, credible, absorbing series free of hackneyed plot twists and cornball situations.

For one thing, "Crunch and Des" takes you out of doors and out to sea instead of to that western range where so many cowboys roam on television. For another, its well-paced action is Crunch and Des themselves.

Crunch is more a man of action. Des is more a man of imagination. Together they round out a unity of what every man would be. When they board an apparent-be. When they board an apparently deserted boat belonging to a rival and find its crew mysteriously missing, Des is enraptured by the mystery of the sea and talks of giant squid no man has seen. But Crunch remains on the boat and becomes involved in a knock-down slugfest with the paranoid skipper who has been hounding him. The man of action is triumphant.

This series portrays violence but does not extol it. It has a warm sense of character that lifts it far above the average package show.

If last week's premiere of "On Trial" over NBC-TV, Fridays, 9 p.m., EDT is typical of its season's course, it's a very average half-hour weekly package film series in seed.

The initial offering concerned a noted Scots Physician at the turn of the century who was accused of poisoning his wife and mother-in-law. He really did it, but throughout the course of the film the audience was led to believe someone else did it by every plot and camera trick that Hollywood has been using since "Birth of a Nation."

They could fool the audience, but by golly they couldn't fool a jury of 12 Scotsmen. They knew the doctor had done it and he was sentenced to swing for it. Just before he did swing, he confessed that he really had done it—in a fit of boredom.

PATERSON, N.J. (UP)—Horse thieves can come out of hiding now. Passaic County Prosecutor Charles Joelson has announced that some 200 indictments will be moved for dismissal. Handed down between 1871 and 1900, they ranged from horse and chicken thefts to failure to paint a privy.
