Grid Tilt Highlights State Thanksgiving

Menu of Activity On Tap to Suit All Tastes

By UNITED PRESS
Housewives hurried to markets, football fans made last minute efforts to get seats on the 50-yard line and children couldn't keep their minds on text books today as Oregon planned for its Thanksgiving day observance.

Special services of Thanksgiving were planned in some communities while ski enthusiasts polished their equipment and dad put another quart of anti-freeze in the family car in anticipation of activities planned for tomorrow.

Residents of the state have a menu of activities scheduled for the day that should satisfy the most discriminating of tastes.

Game Highlights Day
Topping the list of attractions for the day is the Oregon-Oregon State football game at Corvallis. The Beavers, Ross Bowd, host the Ducks in spacious Parker stadium in the 60th renewal of the intra-state rivalry.

And should father desire, he can stay in his living room and witness the classic, "The Civil War" will be beamed by television into homes throughout the western half of the nation.

The day is expected to dawn clear and cold across most of Oregon with temperatures dropping below freezing in most areas tonight. While much of the nation shoveled its way out of snow drifts, Oregon residents simply put on their ear muffs and enjoyed a chilly winter sun.

WU Students Donate Blood

375 Pints Given at Drawing Held by Red Cross

Three hundred and seventy five pints of blood were donated by approximately one third of Willamette university's student body Tuesday.

At the same time donations proffered by some 30 others were rejected for varying reasons.

Tuesday's showing was 20 pints better than for a similar blood drawing a year ago and places the students in a favorable position in connection with competition with other universities for the American Legion trophy.

The trophy is awarded annually to the student body showing the highest percentage of donors.

Willamette students will participate in the December 6 city-wide blood collection and their donations at that time will be included in the campus percentage.

While contributing blood Tuesday, approximately 300 students agreed to become "walking donors." This means they will be available for emergency donations sought by the Red Cross when other sources are not available.

Institutions to Get Thanksgiving Turk

Holiday Fare Planned State

The traditional turkey and all the trimmings will be served in all state institutions Thanksgiving day.

While the menus for the Thanksgiving feast will vary slightly among the various institutions, the dinner to be served at the Oregon state hospital is typical of those planned in the others.

There will be giblet gravy, mashed potatoes, cranberry sauce, buttered asparagus, celery and apples and, of course, mince pie and coffee.

Dr. Dean Brooks, superintendent, has arranged for serving the dinner at 1:30 p.m. and said that in a few cases some delicacies will be provided for some patients who cannot take part in the more elaborate dinner.

Prisoners at the state penitentiary will enjoy turkey and all that goes with it on Thanksgiving day winding up with pumpkin pie instead of mince being served over at the state hospital.

Over at Fairview home in addition to the turkey, there will be candied yams, favorite dish of the superintendent, Dr. Irvin B. Hill, as well as jellied fruit salad, celery and carrot sticks, milk for the children and coffee for the adult patients.

Schools Get Dinners
Sumptuous turkey dinners will be served also at the Hillcrest school for girls, MacLaren school for boys at Woodburn, the state tuberculosis hospital and the state blind and deaf schools.

As another feature of the day, an athletic program will be given Thanksgiving afternoon at the prison and special events are planned in other institutions during the day.

Acting on instructions from members of the state board of control, William Ryan, secretary, told all institutional administrators to "go all out on the Thanksgiving feast."

"It has long been a custom in Oregon to give the unfortunate in our mental institutions and also those in custody in our prisons a Thanksgiving dinner that is as near as possible to one that would be served in their homes," Ryan said.

Human Rights Day Observance Set

Gov. Elmo Smith has designated Dec. 10 as human rights day in Oregon in observance of the 8th anniversary of adoption of the universal declaration of human rights by the General Assembly of the United Nations.

Dr. John R. Richards, chancellor of higher education in Oregon, is chairman of the United States national commission for UNESCO which sponsors human rights day on a world-wide basis.

Officials Hope For Another Deathless Day

Oregon traffic safety officials expressed hope today that Oregon will go death-free tomorrow despite anticipated heavy holiday travel.

The state went death-free last Thanksgiving even though 212 accidents occurred and 38 people were injured.

James R. Banks, executive secretary of the Oregon Traffic Safety Commission, said that "experience has shown the biggest Thanksgiving highway hazard is the driver who tries to crowd too many miles into a day's drive."

Latest count for Oregon shows 361 people have been killed so far this year in street and highway smash-ups.
