OSC NOTES

Winter Activities Are Varied

By PHOEBE LOU BRAUN (Capital Journal Correspondent) CORVALLIS (Special)—After the excitement of Christmas vacation and of the Rose Bowl, most of the Oregon Sisters came back to school for a much needed rest. When the grades came out, many students decided that professors, while trying to elevate the crowded conditions by eliminating freshmen, were eliminating everyone in the process.

Registration, which takes place in the Coleseum was a race, as usual, with people running to get special teachers or special hours, and trying desperately to avoid Saturday classes. Students seen in this pre-class turmoil were Kathy Busick, Nancy Snider, Bob Beals, Judy Bale, Doris Starrett Garrison, Bob Bennett, and Elizabeth Barbee.

A new activity center, which has long been in the planning, soon will be open. Many students carried too many activities, and let grades slip, while others did not enter into any outside projects. Now students need make only one stop to find out which committees, offices, or productions are open for eager helpers.

One of the 16 students chosen for the model United Nations delegation is Kathy Cook, who participated in fall term MUN activities. Kathy will be traveling to Stanford university next spring term, where the delegates will represent the United States.

The five finalists for the Little Colonel of the annual Military ball, will soon be selected. The candidates, which are freshmen women, are chosen by their living groups, and include Arjia Lictvictis and Sharon Bourne of Salem; Diane Chase of Dallas; and Sally DeArmond of Woodburn.
