Bogie Stayed at Top By His Independence

By BOB THOMAS
 HOLLYWOOD — They are burying Humphrey Bogart today, but his legend will live on. What set him apart from other actors? He was a fine performer. But there were others of his generation who were equally fine. Many faded in their middle years. Not Bogie. When he died of cancer at 56, he was still on top of the movie heap. Why did he last? The answer lies in the character he created both on and off the screen. Bogart's whole life had flavor. It was a sharp, pungent, unmistakable flavor of a true individualist. From the start of his Hollywood career, he refused to fit the pattern. While other stars coyly sought after the press, he barked and growled at reporters. But he was viewed with affection by most of the Hollywood press. The reason, he was copy. "The only way to get publicity is to be an exciting enough personality. Then people will write about you," he once said. Bogart loved to slap the face of convention. Most stars shun any mention of liquor and remove glasses from the table when they are photographed. "I defend my American right to take a drink when I feel like it," Bogart said defiantly. Citing the proverb "In wine there is truth," he said he distrusted nondrinkers. "They must have something to hide." One of his favorite theories was that the world is three drinks below normal. He claimed war, strife and intolerance would disappear if everyone caught up. Bogie had opinions on everything, including politics. An ardent Roosevelt man, he campaigned for Ike vs. Taft before the 1932 convention, then came out for Adlai Stevenson. To add to the confusion, he founded what he called the Progressive Independent Reactionary party with himself and writer friends as presidents. Bogart fascinated all of us because of his very independence. We live in a conforming world. All around are pressures to be a member of the team, to buy standard brands, to live standard lives. Most of us do so. Bogart wouldn't conform. That's why he was great.

Perennial 'Good Girl' to Play Part of Helen Morgan in Film

By ALINE MOSBY
 United Press Hollywood Writer
 HOLLYWOOD (UP)—"In this picture," director Michael Curtiz told Ann Blyth, "you're sexy, not holy." Movie-goers will be in for a surprise when they see Hollywood's perennial "good girl" sitting on a piano to portray Helen Morgan, a sensual torch singer of the '20s. Ann will do a hula and sob in the drunk scenes. "I didn't want to test Ann at first," Curtiz admitted as we waited on a Warner Bros. sound stage for the actress to appear for wardrobe tests. I tested 25 girls and interviewed another 25. I talked to Olivia de Havilland and Jennifer Jones. I tested singers Julie London and Connie Russell. After everybody was exhausted, I took a chance and tested Ann. She made just a brilliant test! Inguene Turns Sexy At that moment we saw the sweet star of movies such as "The Student Prince" walk on the set, and it was a sexy walk. She wore a pink beaded dress of the '20s style and carried a long chiffon scarf, one of Helen Morgan's trademarks. With fluffy bangs, short hair and elongated eyebrows, Ann bears a striking resemblance to Miss Morgan. Ann is aware that her fans and Hollywoodites didn't picture her in the coveted Helen Morgan role, which Warner's been trying to get before the cameras since 1943. "When you've grown up in pictures, it's hard for people to realize you're grown up," the former child star said with her sweet smile. Variety Important "Also, I usually have played a certain type of role, the ingenue, except in 'Mildred Pierce' 11 years ago. Yet an actress should be able to portray anything. Variety is very important. "You don't have to have a figure like Venus to portray sex appeal," she added. "I feel a great part of Helen Morgan's appeal was her warmth." The usually demure Miss Blyth does a "corny hula" and a Charleston in the movie, "The Jazz Age." The new Ann also will be belted around by Paul Newman who portrays a racketeer friend. Offscreen, however, it's still the old Ann. One set worker commented on her perfume and suggested she had switched to "My Sin." "Oh, no, it's Lilies-of-the-Valley," she said.

Body of Maestro Toscanini to Lie in State Two Days at Home

NEW YORK — The body of Maestro Arturo Toscanini, musical genius beloved by millions for more than two generations, will lie in state for public viewing today and tomorrow. The Maestro died in his sleep yesterday morning at his home in Riverdale, the Bronx, after a stroke. He would have been 90 in March. Not only the great personages mourned the loss of the diminutive man who wove magical webs of entrancing music with his baton. There were also the countless "little people" — their lives enriched by the tapestries of sound produced for them by a dedicated artist. Said President Eisenhower in a statement. "As man and as magician he gained the admiration of the world. He spoke in the universal language of music, but he also spoke in the language of free men everywhere. "The music he created and the hatred of tyranny that was his are part of the legacy of our time. There will be a Solemn Requiem Mass in St. Patrick's Cathedral at 10 a.m. Saturday. Later the body will be flown to Italy for burial in the family chapel in Milan. Outside the Milan opera, La Scala, the Italian flag was lowered to half mast yesterday. The orchestra there halted rehearsal for one minute of silent tribute.

Ike to Wear Homburg Hat At Inaugural

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Eisenhower has decided to stick to a Homburg hat for his inaugural ceremonies next Monday. The decision was announced by White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty today. The President's choice of headgear was expected this year and is not likely to cause a flurry like the one he caused four years ago when he jolted sartorial circles by discarding the traditional silk topper for a Homburg. Officials, who by protocol copy
