Helser Hearing Case Recessed

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—Federal Judge Louis E. Goodman has recessed for one week a hearing on a petition to dismiss a government suit against J. Henry Helser and Company, Pacific Coast investment counseling firm.

The hearings are on a request by Helser to dismiss the 1954 Securities and Exchange Commission "fraud" suit which accused the firm of false proxy letters to clients, in which he said the company also sought dismissal of an interlocutory order issued by Goodman in April, 1955.

Robert E. Burns, Helser's attorney, told the judge Friday that his order had a "serious" effect on the "morale" of Helser employees and clients. He said the order also had been used by competitor firms as "sales device against us."

During most of Friday's session, SEC attorney F. E. Kennamer Jr., put into the hands of Helser's attorneys the suit, which he said the company had violated the 1955 understanding. He also charged that Helser had been guilty of misrepresentation since the company was placed under court order.

Kennamer was expected to complete the government's arguments against the dismissal on Jan. 25. Burns said the company would present its side of the matter after the government completes its case.

Goodman called a special meeting of the attorneys in his chambers after the session, but the subject matter of the meeting was not made public.

Oregon's share of the federal aid program will amount to $600,000. The bill, enacted by the 84th congress, provides for federal aid in the amount of $500-million over a 10-year period.

Chairman Harold Wendel explained the need for setting up the point system to determine priority by saying, "we've already received applications for about twice the amount to be granted in Oregon."

The point system is based on financial and water pollution control needs of communities, and upon their readiness to get the projects underway.

Stayton Pays Last Bill on Civic Building

STAYTON (Special)—The civic building is now free of all indebtedness, Ward A. Inglis, city recorder, told the January session of the city council. He informed that body that the final payment of $751.31 had been made.

The indebtedness, amounting to $11,270.46, was incurred Dec. 1, 1951, under contract from the Stayton Bean Festival association. Three civic-minded citizens, Roy Phillip, John W. Etzel and Joe Pieser agreed to underwrite the venture, each putting up a third of the amount.

Originally a community project with labor and materials donated, the building was planned as a place in which large-scale meetings could be held. Events of the annual Stayton Bean Festival have been held in the building when inclement weather forced them indoors, and the annual Festival dance is held in the building.

Many projects to raise money for the benefit of the Stayton Memorial hospital, such as auctions, pancake breakfasts and others, have been held in the civic building. County 4-H fairs have been held in the building on two occasions.

Footings Heavy

Situated on 3.31 acres of land, the building was provided with footings under the ground floor sufficient to support a second story. Voters authorized purchase of the building for city hall purposes in August of 1951, but nothing has come of it to date and the city continues use of its city hall on Third street.

At the time of sale, the Bean Festival association pledged added support of the premises as funds became available. The Festival association paid half of the cost of paving in front of the building last summer in time to insure better access for those attending.

Highway to Cut Section From Facility

Option 70 Acres for Another Site on East Side

ALBANY (Special)—The first official action toward moving Albany's airport was taken Thursday night by Linn's City-County Airport Zoning board.

The group instructed Albany City Engineer Dan Lee to draw up specifications for the proposal. Board members moved to call a public hearing on the change as soon as these specifications are available for use in the public notices which must be published prior to the hearing.

However, the board has jurisdiction only over safety considerations.

City Manager William Bollman told the airport zoning board that the new freeway will cut into the present airport, forcing the city to move runways and hangars some 200 to 300 feet to the east.

He explained that he already has optioned 70 acres to the east of the present airfield to allow for the movement. He said another 25 acres is needed.

The State Highway department has indicated it will need some 52 acres off the west edge of the field. The city is seeking more than that amount of space on the east side with an eye toward including a recreation area in the plan, Bollman said.

Benjamin Franklin brought the first bathtub to the United States after a visit to France 175 years ago.
