50 Churches Burned In Little Over Year

Arson, Heating, Wire Systems Blamed

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fires have destroyed or damaged approximately 50 churches in the United States in little more than a year.

Some have been the prey of arsonists. Incendiarism is blamed or suspected in about 15 of the fires. But most of them appear to have been accidental.

BLM to Offer Added Timber During 1957

The Salem district of the Bureau of Land Management plans to offer 158 million board feet of timber during 1957 according to an announcement from the office of District Forester Otto Krueger. This represents an increase of approximately 25 million board feet over the 1956 plan.

The volume is expected to be represented in 71 separate tracts ranging from 250 thousand to 10 million board feet as well as a considerable number of unscheduled tracts less than 250 thousand board feet.

The Salem district encompasses O&C and public domain lands administered by the Bureau of Land Management in 12 extreme north-west Oregon counties extending from approximately Junction City to the Columbia river and from the summit of the Cascade mountains to the Pacific ocean.

Nearly one-third of the volume will be in salvage timber. Current regulations permit salvage timber to receive priority processing in any O&C marketing area.

The annual allowable district cut on a sustained yield basis has recently been increased from 102 million to 134 million board feet. This increase was made possible through new forest inventories geared to the changing utilization standards. The Bureau is permitted to exceed the indicated allowable cut for short periods of emergency salvage situations such as fire, wind or insect epidemic. The cut is later balanced by a reduction, if necessary, following completion of salvage operations. Some salvage type timber is not considered in the inventory and it too may be removed in addition to the sustained volume of 134 million board feet.

Information regarding the timber sale plan or any of the individual tracts may be obtained by contacting the District Forester's office at 215 North Front St. in Salem.

Defective heating and wiring systems are blamed specifically in some cases. In others, the cause is listed simply as "unknown" or "undetermined" without suggestion. Responsibility for much of the destruction in the houses of worship rests on architects who ignore church fire problems, it has been suggested.

Horatio Bond, an NFPA official, says architects continue to build "hidden avenues for church destruction" such as blind spaces in open partitions between outside walls and interior decorative walls, and between roof and ceiling.

Such avenues, says Bond, may carry a fire from the ground or basement level to the roof or steeple, with the result that a fire may first be discovered 50 or 60 feet above the point of origin.

Bond said surveys by the NFPA show that heating systems are the chief causes of church fires and that incendiaries caused by deranged or feeble-minded persons rate second.

Worst hit in the recent spate of fires was Trenton, N. J., where arsonists struck at eight places of worship, including St. Mary's Roman Catholic Cathedral, where three persons perished in a 3 1/2 million dollar fire.

Elber C. Lucas pleaded guilty Dec. 19 to setting five of the fires, and Theodore Pravda pleaded guilty three days later to setting three others — two in churches and one in a synagogue.

The largest church in Connecticut, the St. Joseph Roman Catholic Cathedral in Hartford, was destroyed at a loss of more than 15 million dollars in one of two church fires in the city in 21 hours.

The other fire destroyed St. Patrick's church about a mile away.

Hartford Fire Chief Henry G. Thomas said the fires appeared to be "more than coincidence" but no evidence of arson has been found.

There have been more than a dozen church fires this month alone.

One of the most recent major fires was in Syracuse, N.Y., where flames wrecked the First Methodist Church and a nearby building housing the Weyman Methodist Publishing Assn. Damage was estimated at more than a million dollars.

A second church, the Wesleyan Methodist, and office structures also were damaged in the fire.

Fire Marshal John Dacey ruled out arson as the cause.

CHAPTER 12

West Point for Law Officers

Had J. Edgar Hoover ever dreamed of directing a huge federal police system enforcing the law for every city and hamlet in the country—it might have been realized in the early 1930s.

This period was a nightmare in the history of crime in America. It was a nightmare in which an army of criminals had better weapons, faster automobiles, greater range of movement and far more political influence than the poverty-stricken local police.

This was the period when demands came for a national police force which would take over the job of the local police.

Hoover believed the answer to the crime problem lay in taking police work out of politics, and in giving all policemen scientific training in law enforcement.

Little Training

At that time most rookie policemen were given a badge and a gun and told to go to work. Few cities had any kind of training program for police officers, and generally there was an attitude that none was needed.

One chief of police commanding a force of more than 100 men dismissed the idea of scientific police training with the curious comment: "... all that policemen need know (is) the Ten Commandments."

Time after time Hoover argued—in letters, speeches, articles, and memoranda—that the basic responsibility for law enforcement in a democracy rested with the local police and should remain there.

In a letter to the Topika Daily Capital, Hoover said in 1936:

"The Federal Bureau of Investigation believes that the secret of crime eradication lies not in a national police force but in solidarity and the combined linking of all law enforcement agencies. It believes in a close-knit cooperation, each unit capable of handling its peculiar problem, but capable, also, when necessary, of mobilizing its efforts in a concerted drive against the criminal element of this country."

Conference Call

Hoover discussed his ideas with Atty. Gen. Homer Cummings, and together they carried a proposal for a police training school before the Attorney General's Crime Conference, which met in December, 1934.

Hoover told the conference: "The value of adequate training has already been proven in the training schools maintained by our bureau for its personnel... With but slight readjustment of operations, these training facilities already established could be extended to the local law enforcement agencies of the country."

The conference recommended that the school be established, and on July 2, 1935, the first class of 23 police officers gathered for 12 weeks of study. This was the beginning of the FBI's now famous National Academy which was Hoover's answer to demands for a national police force.

In its first 21 years, the academy gave instruction to more than 2,000 law enforcement officers. Out of this number, more than 20 per cent climbed to positions as executive heads of their departments with such titles as chief of police, sheriff, and state police chief.

Knowledge Goes Home

The number of graduates is small when compared with the total number of police officers in the United States—some 250,000. But each graduate has left the academy qualified to organize police schools in his home town and to share the knowledge he has gained with the other members of his force.

Two 12-week sessions are held each year—sessions in which some 20 students attend classes from 9 to 5, five days a week. After-dinner hours are taken up with the typing of notes and study.

It's a hard, grueling period in which no outside interests are allowed to interfere with work. The only excuse accepted for missing a class are sickness, illness in the family or complying with a court subpoena.

Experience Counts

The academy's regular instructors are experienced and well-trained FBI teachers. Other FBI special agents are available in the teaching of highly specialized courses. Lectures are given by educators, criminologists, lawyers and others.

Baha'i Secretary Talks Here Sunday

"This Wondrous Day" is the title of a talk to be given by Mrs. Dorothy Henderson, Portland, during a public meeting to be held at Salem's YWCA, 768 State Street, Sunday afternoon, January 20, at four o'clock. Mrs. Henderson, secretary of the Baha'i Assembly of Portland, is a frequent speaker before church and other groups.

"This local observance of World Religion Day will have the fundamental oneness of religion for its main theme," Miss Katherine Gouley, Salem, announced.

Verne Arthur and Mrs. Marjorie Thompson, both of Salem, are assisting Miss Gouley in planning the observance.

The steel industry, companies report, has 837,600 employees in the United States.

The FBI man said, "But why didn't you tell me? We could have worked out something."

The police officer shrugged. "Pride, I reckon. I guess I was ashamed to say anything. But it's been worth it and I figure I'm a better man for what I've done." He shook hands and walked out.

(Monday: The Anonymous Nine.)

Perhaps more than any other single program, the National Academy brought closer cooperation between the FBI and the local police. The FBI agents and the students came to know each other and to have a better appreciation of the others' problems.

New Perspectives

Local officers saw the FBI men in an entirely different light—and the FBI's agents gained a new perspective by looking at the local men's problems.

There was, for example, a heavy-set officer from the sagebrush country who came to the academy and immediately made himself disagreeable by refusing to associate in off hours with either the FBI instructors of the other students. He was overweight when he began training, and the pounds dropped off at an alarming rate. But he didn't complain. At meal-time, and at night, he went off by himself. He became the "lone wolf."

At the close of the session, he came to the office of the assistant director of the FBI in charge of training. He fiddled with his hat for a moment and then blurted out his story:

"I know you and the other fellows think I'm a pretty strange character acting like I have. But I'd like for you to know the reason. I had to mortgage my house to get enough money to come up here and at the same time take care of my family back home along

Trees, flowers and their leaves develop in a right proportion to one another as evidenced by the thick leaves of the sturdy oak and the tiny leaf of the graceful birch... Fireplaces, andirons, pictures, chairs, sofas, lamps, cushions, as well as rugs, carpets, must all be thought of in regard to their size and their relation to the size of the room, their place in it and the relation to each other... If the problem is a room small in scale and you wish to create a feeling of greater spaciousness, select small scale furniture and delicate patterns.
