Slender Females Should Pin a Medal on Designer Orry Kelly

By ALINE MOSBY
 United Press Hollywood Writer

HOLLYWOOD (UP)—Big-busted blondes may delight some movie and TV fans, but as designer Orry Kelly is concerned they either should disguise those charms or stay out of sight.
 Kelly thought the sweater girls should do what their "shelves" do. His pink checks quivered with indignation.
 "They shouldn't go out after dark," he snapped. "When women with big derrieres ask me what they should wear to the beach, I tell them to stay home from the beach."
 Slender females should pin a medal on Mr. Kelly, for he thinks a small or medium-sized bust looks better in clothes than those 39-inch wonders that are in the entertainment world these days.
 "These blondes that have four inches of shelf! Ask-asked the designer, 'I saw one on the Jack Benny Show recently who looked deformed.'
 "Let's face it—people are influenced by fashions they see on the screen. Someone like Grace Kelly is a great addition—good taste that helps people all over the world. But it's too bad there's a certain amount of bad taste," he added.

Returns to Movies
 The colorful and controversial designer has stayed away from movie fashions for five years to concentrate on his painting career, but MGM brought him back to do the costumes for "Les Girls." Two of the stars he's dressing—Tina Fey and Kay Kendall—have average figures.
 Busty Mitzi Gaynor doesn't but, "She wears just skirts and blouses in this picture so no problem is involved."
 But just mention the names of Diana Dors, Jayne Mansfield and Jane Russell to Orry Kelly and he looks sad.

"The way other studios dress those girls—busts bulging at you,

INSIDE HOLLYWOOD

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (UP)—Movie stars pay for their divorces, both in money and personal hell.
 California law sees to it that they pay in money. This state has a community property law that decrees husband and wife share equally in wealth acquired during their marriage.
 Some cynics claim this law has held together many a shaky marriage. But a filmland lawyer disputed this, claiming, "If a man can't live peacefully with his wife, he is liable to pay anything—even go in debt—to be free."
 Errol Flynn is a classic example. He has earned millions but is a debtor, due in large part to his alimony payments to Lily Damita and Nora Eddington.
 Another case is Jack Webb. He married Lily London when both were struggling performers. He gave her a half-million of his

Cool Down, Man, You're Too Old for a Teen-Age Girl

Dear Dorothy Dix: What can a 26-year-old man do when he discovers he's in love with a 16-year-old girl? Should I tell her or not? I can't ignore her, since we both work for the same firm.

Dear Jimmy: This is the time for prudence and patience. Say nothing, and in time your ardor will probably cool. A declaration of love would undoubtedly send the poor girl looking for another job. To her you should say as old as Methusalem!

Dear Mrs. W.R.: See the Family Court of your community. A dependent parent should be helped by all surviving children, but sometimes it's too easy to shift the burden entirely to one set of shoulders.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Our school has a happy solution to the problem of mixing boys and girls. Each year we have a formal dance and the girls ask the boys to take them. This way we finally get to the attention of boys we've been trying to have notice us—Myra
 Dear Myra: A first-rate idea.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I'm in love with a boy the same age I am (15) and want to invite him to a party. He can't come without a car and since he has no driver's license, I don't know if he will accept. Should I ask anyway?—Sally

Dear Sally: Your only responsibility is the invitation. Transportation is entirely up to the boy. If he wants to come with you, he'll find a way. To make it easier, you might manage to have someone invited who has a car, license, and lives near your friend.

Dear Dorothy Dix: My husband and I have been married only a few months. We are very happy except for the fact that he insists on leaving his former girl friends over for dinner every Saturday night.—Concerned

Dear Concerned: Invite your former boy friends, too, and make it a real party!
 Your man needs a lesson in the why's and wherefore's of marriage, particularly the responsibility department.

Send your problem to Dorothy Dix. Or write for her free leaflet D-24, "Alcoholism." In all cases, be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and send request to her, care of this newspaper.
