Forecasters Feel Strawberry Price to Be 'About' 12 Cents

By CLAUDE STEUSLOFF
Capital Journal Special Writer

Optimists stayed away from the Marion county strawberry meeting which was attended by 150 growers and processors at the Isaac Walton league clubhouse Friday.

Forecasters of prices which growers will receive for their 1957 crop were cagey, but a 12 cent figure bobbed up several times during the meeting.

One speaker said that in the future picking cost may equal half the price growers will receive for their berries. Last year most growers paid five cents per pound to pickers. "But I don't want newspapers to say that in making this statement I am predicting 10-cent berry prices," he added.

Price Dropped

Last year the cash buyer strawberry market here started at 15 cents but after California prices took a drastic drop to 12 cents, the bulk of the local crop went at 14 cents.

Marvin Van Cleave, in his second term as president of the Oregon Washington strawberry council, said that cost of production for the average grower is 18 cents per pound, calculated on the average Oregon yield of two tons per acre.

"As long as our prices are governed by production of other areas we must look hard at our competitors—and I mean California," Van Cleave said. He pointed out that several growers in the Watsonville, Calif., area told him they could grow berries for 12 cents but half of their crop is sold fresh for 18 cents. Here, only about five per cent of the crop is sold fresh.

Better Varieties

Other states have developed better varieties adapted for particular classes of the berry trade, according to Van Cleave. "Nobody around here is particularly anxious to quit the strawberry business but we are being forced out," he said.

Rabbit Jumps In Car Path; Then Smash

A jackrabbit was blamed for an accident in which a car rolled over three times on the Baldock freeway Friday, state police reported.

Robert Chiles Beazley, 23, Portland, told officers he was driving about 70 miles an hour when the rabbit jumped out in front of him. He swerved into the left lane to miss it, he said, and lost control of the car. It struck gravel on the shoulder. The accident occurred about three miles south of the Wilsonville bridge, police said.

Beazley and Carl A. Harlan, 23, Portland, a passenger in the car, were taken to Salem General hospital for treatment of head cuts. They were released after treatment.

Beazley was cited to court on a charge of no operator's license, officers said.

Traffic Violations in January Termed High by Commission

In addition, 748 drivers had their licenses suspended on offenses ranging from driving while intoxicated to failure to yield the right-of-way.

The Department of Motor Vehicles, through its driver license division, handed out 183 of the suspension total, 110 to drivers who had accumulated too many accidents or violations to be considered safe risks behind the wheel.

Other reasons for the suspensions included: driving while intoxicated, 281; reckless driving, 64; violation of basic rule, 40; hit and run, 13; failure to report an accident, 40; and failure to stop, five.

Ninety-five of the suspensions amounted to extensions of previous "no driving" orders when drivers were caught operating on an already suspended license.

Two accidents involving moving vehicles and cars stopped for traffic were investigated by city police Friday afternoon.

Officers said a car driven by Harold Dale Robertson, 2335 Bird Hill St., struck the rear of a car driven by Aiden A. Ziegenhagel, 348 Lori Ave., in the 200 block of South Commercial street about 4:55 p.m., knocking the latter forward into a car stopped in front of it.

Mrs. Ruth Ziegenhagel, a passenger in her husband's car, suffered a knee laceration and their eight-month-old baby suffered an apparent concussion, city first aidmen said. They were taken to a doctor for examination.
