

Luis Somoza Easy Winner In Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UP)—Early returns from Nicaragua's general election pointed today to an overwhelming victory for U.S.-educated Luis A. Somoza to succeed his assassinated father as president.

First votes counted in the capital gave the 35-year-old Somoza 60,000 to 3,000 for the Conservative Party's presidential candidate, Edmundo Amador.

The voters also balloted Sunday for a new Congress. Returns were expected later today.

Somoza's election was a foregone conclusion months ago when Congress appointed him to fill the office until the national elections after the assassination of his father, Anastasio Somoza.

Amador admitted Sunday he had no hopes of winning.
